New York, Oct. 6.—Like some slumbering monster awakening to the fact he was being shackled, the New York Yankees brought to bear their batting might in one uproarious inning—the sixth—broke through the bonds of Carl Hubbell's one-hit pitching and won today's opening game of the World Series.

By the score of 8 to 1, they won it at Yankee Stadium, where 60,573 customers who poured $234,256 into the World Series pot, watched the Giants retreat in disorder before the advertised batting power of the Yankees.

But for five innings, Hubbell was a magnificent figure out there on the mound as he nursed a 1-0 lead for the Giants with a diet of southpaw curves to Yankee left-handers and screwballs to the right-handers in the Yankee line-up. The frail, almost fragile southpaw was making a gallant bid to throttle that Yankee power. Joe DiMaggio's first inning single had been the only Yankee hit. And then came the sixth. Yankee bats began to belch base hits. Five solid swats they connected for. Hubbell they drove from the mound. Behind him, Hubbell's defense cracked woefully. Two damaging errors were contributed by Shortstop Billy Bartell and Second Baseman Burgess Whitehead. Seven Yankee runs poured over the plate and the Yankees had the ball game.

Gomez in Rare Form.

But the Yankees had pitching skill as well as batting power today. They produced in Lean Lefty Gomez a southpaw who was the master of even the master Hubbell. While Hubbell was attempting to sneak his curves past the hitters, Gomez was literally blowing his fast ball by 'em. Valiantly he stuck to his task when the Giants took a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning and not another run did he permit. Only six hits did he surrender to the Giants.

By their triumph the Yankees catapulted into overwhelming favoritism to win the series. The odds of 2 to 1 in their favor before the series started now have undergone a drastic revision and betting commissioners tonight were quoting the American Leaguers as 2-to-7 shots.

Paradoxically, their favorite weapon—the home run—did not figure in the Yankees' triumph until after the game had been secure-

Roosevelt Sure U. S. Will Back Wage-Hr., Crop Control Laws

He Will Decide Within Week Whether to Call Special Session on New Deal Objectives; Won't Commit Self as to Future Court Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 6.—President Roosevelt, expressing a conviction that the average man wants the Administration's program, announced today that he would decide within a week whether he would call a special session of Congress to speed those measures.

At a press conference, which terminated his two-weeks-long journey to the West Coast and back, the President declined to amplify his Chicago peace address, which brought immediate repercussions from other nations. He had no comment on Associate Justice Hugo Black, who took his Supreme Court seat after replying to newspaper articles about his connection with the Ku Klux Klan.

The average man, said the President, cared not too much about how the objectives of the Administration program were obtained.

The result: The President prepared to start a new campaign for such things as surplus crop control, wage-hour and child labor laws, executive reorganization of the Government, and the establishment of regional planning boards.

He added that it could not be said now that reorganization of the Supreme Court was on or off the program.

The convening date of the session, if there is one, he assented, will be between November 8 and 16. That would give Congress time, he said, to get the spade work done before the Christmas holidays. If there is no special term Congress will not return to Washington until January 3.

He will discuss with aides after he returns to the White House Friday the advisability of recommending additional district judges. This was part of his original court-reorganization program.

NLRB Limits C. I. O. Scope in Steel Co. Ruling

Craft Unions Are Held Competent Agents for Bargaining.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—In a decision apparently limiting the scope of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the National Labor Relations Board ruled today a minority craft union may be a bargaining agent for workers within its jurisdiction in a plant where the majority of the employes are members of an industrial union.

The effect of the ruling in the case in which the board acted was to make it possible for three American Federation of Labor unions to obtain recognition as collective bargaining agents at the Commonwealth plant of the General Steel Castings Corporation in Granite City, Ill., where a majority of the workers belong to a C. I. O. affiliate.

The board found that the C. I. O.'s Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers represented at least 2,100 of the Commonwealth plant's 2,700 employes.

The three A. F. of L. unions, which had sought recognition as

Judge Expunges Auditor's Ouster Recommendation

A recommendation of the Montgomery County grand jury that the incumbent of the office of "accountant and, or, county auditor" be dismissed was ordered stricken from its record by Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward, at Rockville, yesterday.

Judge Woodward declared the grand jury had exceeded its authority, when he ruled on a petition brought by C. Vaughn Darby. He held the reference in the record could mean no one but Darby and said it should be expunged as "improper." Darby was not named in the report.

Judge Woodward said the jury had authority only to indict or to ignore evidence brought before it and that in his five years on the bench he had never failed so to instruct jurors.

U. S. War Sales Up Sevenfold In One Month

Russia Buys Over Half of $18,000,000 Munitions Deliveries.

Amid world-wide war alarms, the State Department said yesterday exports of war supplies licensed by the United States in September had jumped to $18,089,537.50 as compared with $2,866,190.67 for the previous month.

Of that striking total more than half, or $10,057,920 went to Soviet Russia, whose purchases included armor plate and guns for one or more battleships, $1,000,000 worth of propellant powders, and $1,505,000 worth of ammunition. In August, Russia's purchases amounted to only $355,168.86.

Other countries, however, showed marked increases in their imports of munitions. China's total more than doubled in the month, due to heavy purchases of bombs, grenades and such weapons. Chinese imports for September were valued at $2,809,099, for August at $1,207,252.90. Japan purchased supplies costing $438,737.52, chiefly aircraft, as compared with $296,435.07 in August.

Rumania made a striking purchase of grenades and bombs valued at $1,200,500 and airplane parts costing $15,600, while her total purchases for August were only $3,500.

Italy's imports jumped from $10,000 to $72,900. Germany's from $84,354.83 to $150,269.85, and India's from $3,383 to $82,614.58.

South American countries were comparatively heavy buyers. Colombia bought $102,177.11 worth, chiefly fighting planes, as compared with $1,893 in August; Argentina's buying went up from $55,081.50 to $1,492,391.65, mostly aircraft; Brazil also specialized in planes, spending a total of $452,051.65, a considerable jump over the $91,587.60 total for August, and Canada's imports were valued at $500,638.96 for September, $82,778.58 in August.

In connection with the Soviet purchases, it was disclosed State Department objections previously made to Russian purchases of 16-inch guns for battleships had been dropped. At the time the objection was raised the United States was engaged in efforts to bring about international agreement to limit the caliber of guns on capital ships to 14 inches.

Duce Given Day to Act on Spain Parley

French, British Patience About Exhausted by Italy's Delay.

Stern Show of Power Forecast to Expel Black Shirts.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 6.—France and Great Britain tonight gave Benito Mussolini 24 hours grace to respond to their joint bid for tri-power discussion of Spanish volunteer withdrawal.

The two governments, alarmed by new Italian aid to the Spanish insurgents, strongly indicated their patience with Il Duce is not unlimited after Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden conferred lengthily with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Ambassador Charles Corbin of France.

"The two governments have agreed on the desirability of receiving an early reply from Italy," said a statement issued following the conferences.

Parade of Power Seen.

Feeling grew in authoritative quarters that a stern show of Anglo-French force may be the only way to get Black Shirt legions out of Spain, a problem that worries Britain as much as does the Far Eastern crisis.

"We may have to take quick, very decisive action to strangle at its source the prolonged Italian intervention in behalf of the insurgents," said one informed source, though just what direct action the British cabinet might take remained a secret.

The opinion was expressed that Italy's devious attempts to impress Britain and France with her strength—by sending new planes and troops to Spain—actually were a sign of weakness, and that the possibility remained of solving the problem with no more drastic steps than opening the French frontier and lifting the arms ban on the Madrid-Valencia government.

Tremendous naval concentrations, patroling the Mediterranean against submarine pirates, could give a mighty show of sea-power, and French troops could be mobilized on the Italian border if a military showdown comes.

The cabinet meeting today was believed to have indorsed fully the Franco-British stand in international affiars.

Britain's reply to the reappearance of submarine piracy in the Mediterranean was dispatch of eight more destroyers that will bring her Mediterranean patrol to 52 destroyers of the 80 she has built since the World War. The fighting vessels are scheduled to assemble at Portsmouth tomorrow for assignment to Mediterranean duty.

2 Die, 6 Scalded As Liner's Main Valve Explodes

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—Trapped in an inferno of live steam, two ship's officers were killed and six others were badly scalded today when the six-inch main valve of the Clyde Mallory liner Brazos exploded.

Two firemen were burned when they plunged down into the steam-boiling engine room in a rescue attempt.

The dead were A. A. Kennedy, chief engineer, and W. Mitchell, second assistant engineer. The Brazos runs from New York to Charleston and Jacksonville.

Excitement Over Charge Fills Nippon

"The Turn of the Tide"—an Editorial—Page 8.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Thursday), Oct. 7.—The Japanese foreign office called an emergency conference today following United States action condemning Japan as a treaty violator.

Excitement spread through the streets as crowds clustered around the newsboys.

[The Japanese Foreign Office sternly warned that Japan was prepared to take "strongest" measures in reply to the action of the United States, the United Press reported. A canvass of official and unofficial Japanese opinion disclosed that the nation was prepared to resist, with force of arms if necessary, any effort by the United States or other powers to force her to halt her war with China, the dispatch added.]

Government officials reserved comment on action by the United States and the League of Nations Assembly.

Await Word From Envoy.

They said they were awaiting notification from the Japanese Ambassador to the United States, Hiroshi Saito, on the pronouncement issued by the State Department in Washington.

Though comment on the League's action was declined, the oft-repeated statement of the foreign office was recalled:

"Since Japan is not a member of the League's political organization, we cannot be concerned by any attitudes or positions the League may take."

This sentiment first was expressed when a League sub-committee condemned the bombings of Nanking and Canton and has been reiterated since on a number of occasions.

Widespread attention continued to be given to President Roosevelt's speech.

Exclusion Act Deplored.

Japanese foreign office and naval spokesmen, taking the President's Chicago speech as a reference to Japan, declared their intention of pressing Japan's present policy in China.

The foreign office spokesman also took occasion to attack the United States exclusion act of 1924, restricting Asiatic immigration to America, as "one which is against the natural laws of mankind and is greatly deplored by the Japanese people."

The high naval official said, "We cannot stay our hands out of respect for a world opinion formed on the basis of dispatches rewritten by Chinese government officials.

"We believe the surest way to minimize suffering is to speed the conclusion. We will do everything possible to speed the end and bring the situation back to normal."

Nazis Caution U. S.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—Germany, joining Italy and Japan in angry answers to President Roosevelt's suggestion for a "quarantine" of aggressor powers, cautioned him today to remember the collapse of Woodrow Wilson's efforts to find a basis for world peace.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was contended, failed to discuss the question of bolshevism, which it termed the world's greatest menace, and neglected to explain what he meant by "bad" nations.

Geneva Enthusiastic.

Geneva (Thursday), Oct. 7 (AP).—Prompt and firm steps to halt the undeclared Sino-Japanese war are now assured, diplomats at the League of Nations said today, following American condemnation of Japan as a treaty violator.

The State Department's declaration issued in Washington was received with enthusiasm here.

Officials said they recognized that the American policy, while "having

Stop Helping Japan—Stimson

By Henry L. Stimson,
Former Secretary of State.
(A Letter to The Washington Post.)

Americans are shocked and outraged at what is taking place in the Far East. But to many of them it presents merely a confused picture of distant horrors with which they think we have no necessary connection and to which they can close their eyes and turn their backs in the belief that we owe no duty to the situation except to keep out of it and forget it. It may be useful under such circumstances to try to recall briefly certain broad features inherent in this situation which relate to us and our ultimate future.

STIMSON.

In the first place, many of us do not adequately appraise the size and character of the Chinese nation; the influence of its civilization on Asia in the past and, what is far more important, the influence for good or evil which it may have on the rest of the entire world, including ourselves, in the years and centuries to come. For 4,000 years China has maintained what is far and away the most persistent cultural solidarity which has existed in the world. In all those centuries no foreign conquest and no passage of time has been able permanently to materially change or deflect her development.

In the next place, the dominant characteristic of this culture of these four hundred fifty millions of people, devoted mainly to agriculture, has been for centuries inherently peaceful. As one evidence of this, their culture has produced for themselves a status where the individual Chinese has required less government than the individuals of any other nation. Although covering an immense territory with enormous numbers, their personal relationships have remained virtually upon a family or patriarchal basis as distinguished from the various forms of community and national government existing elsewhere. Recent Chinese wars have been purely defensive and internal. No outside nation has any reason to fear any armed attack from China provided China continues her own peculiar methods of development and organization. On the contrary, all such nations could look forward to profitable commercial intercourse with the millions of

Japan's Envoys Deny Charges

Insistence that Japan has not violated its treaties came from the Japanese Embassy last night shortly after the State Department had announced its conclusions against the Tokyo government.

SUMA.

"As the Japanese government has repeatedly made clear," said Yakashiro Suma, counselor of the Embassy, "its course in China has nothing to do with the two treaties; its actions are in no way inconsistent with the treaties."

He said the last paragraph of the State Department statement, in which the charge of violation of the agreements was contained, was "not factual."

"It is not compatible with Japan's course in China," he insisted.

"We have violated no treaties."

Japanese officials have maintained in numerous speeches that the policy pursued in China involved only safeguarding Japan's interests. They have contended that China instigated the incidents that led to Tokyo's dispatching of military forces to that country.

The assertion that Japan is in a struggle with communistic elements in China, which threaten Japan's position there, also has been advanced.

Far from admitting any culpability in the Far Eastern struggle, the Japanese spokesmen have called for the "co-operation" of this and other countries in pursuing her policy.

Contending that hostilities were forced upon her, Japan has refused to assume responsibility for any losses of life or property suffered by Americans in her military attacks on Chinese cities.

Counselor Suma said that while the embassy had not transmitted contents of the State Department statement to the Japanese government, it had been sent to Tokyo by press associations.

Eden Told to Sound Out U. S.

London, Oct. 6.—Foreign Minister Anthony Eden emerged from a meeting of the British Cabinet today charged with the mission of ascertaining what steps the United States is prepared to take in invocation of the Nine-Power Treaty and the Briand-Kellogg Pact in the Far East.

EDEN.

This was reported in reliable sources after the cabinet officers were summoned to No. 10 Downing Street to discuss President Roosevelt's Chicago speech.

The ministers, including Eden, were said to have agreed that, as a result of the speech and action by the League of Nations Assembly toward Japan, the Nine-Power Treaty signatories should be convened as quickly as is feasible.

Although they regarded London as the most practicable site of such a meeting, it was understood they would not object to selection of Washington.

The cabinet was known to have discussed the probable "steadying" effect of the President's speech on the dictator-ruled nations of Europe, and was said to have found significance in the closeness with which the President's speech followed the text of the Nine-Power Treaty.

Hence, the State Department's later action in formally accusing Japan of treaty violation came as no surprise.

It was also reported that in high circles here there was a belief the President's speech was timed to coincide with the meeting of the League Assembly.

League Warns Japan on War, Calls 9-Power Treaty Signers

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Oct. 6.—The League of Nations put pressure on Japan tonight to end her undeclared war on China.

The League Assembly threw its "moral support" to China, called on the Nine-Power Treaty group to act and told Japan there might be other measures if she did not quit her war.

The Assembly, in which 52 nations sit, first unanimously adopted a report of its advisory committee which named Japan as the guilty nation in the Far Eastern strife and warned of the possibility of international action unless Japan agrees to a peaceful nine-power settlement.

Then Aga Khan, president of the Assembly, dispatched letters to League members who are signatories of the Washington Nine-Power Treaty, to guarantee China's territorial integrity, inviting them to call a conference to consider what steps may be taken to end the fighting.

Although the assembly adjourned, it left machinery running to deal with the war through the plan to call League-member adherents of the Nine-Power Treaty and through its advisory committee on Sino-Japanese affairs, on which the United States sits as an observer.

The advisory committee was expected to meet again within a month and it was believed that the Assembly would be called back in a spe-

Chinese War Violates Law Of Nations, America Says

Formal Arraignment Recites 9-Power and Kellogg Pacts.

Trade Sanctions May Be Invoked

Economic Discipline Has Been Discussed in White House Circles.

Text of Statement—Page 7.

By William V. Nesslv.

The United States last night formally accused Japan of violating the Nine-Power Pact and the Kellogg-Briand Treaty and condemned her as the aggressor in the Sino-Japanese war.

Thus, quick action was taken to follow up President Roosevelt's address at Chicago Tuesday, in which he offered complete collaboration by this country in efforts to "quarantine" disturbers of international peace.

The action, announced by the State Department, put the American Government in accord with the League of Nations Assembly, which yesterday voted Japan the aggressor in the conflict with China and warned of measures to be taken unless the Tokyo government ceases its campaign.

Concurs With League.

At the same time it paved the way for the United States to participate in the projected conference of signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty at which steps to curb Japan's aggression will be considered.

"In the light of the unfolding developments in the Far East," the State Department's announcement said, "the Government of the United States has been forced to the conclusion that the action of Japan in China is inconsistent with the principles which should govern the relationships between nations and is contrary to the provisions of the Nine-Power Treaty of February 6, 1922, regarding principles and policies to be followed in matters concerning China, and to those of the Kellogg-Briand Pact of August 27, 1928. Thus the conclusions of this Government with respect to the foregoing are in general accord with those of the Assembly of the League of Nations."

The Department still was without official notice of the convoking of the meeting for signers of the Nine-Power Pact and withheld any comment on matters concerning the conference.

Interest Centers on Action.

The Department's statement made it clear that the United States intends to collaborate to the full extent of its ability with the League of Nations' action to halt the onslaught on China.

Intense interest centered, meanwhile, on the nature of the action to be proposed. The Nine Power treaty, signed at Washington, itself makes no suggestion of action in case of violation. Article seven merely provides:

"The contracting powers agree that, whenever a situation arises which in the opinion of any one of them involves the application of the stipulations of the present treaty, and renders desirable discussion of such application, there shall be full

Davidson Blackmail Victim, Checks Indicate; Police Study Mysterious Gasoline Purchases

A new theory that Elmer J. Davidson, slain United States Chamber of Commerce official, was the victim of a blackmail plot and was killed when he refused to continue "payoffs" was advanced by investigators last night after an examination of his bank account revealed an unusual number of canceled checks.

Again searching Davidson's personal files and belongings, Virginia State Police Sergt. E. J. McDermott, accompanied by State Policeman Maury G. Sneed and Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange, of the District homicide squad, discovered the checks and learned that several names appearing as payees were not known to Davidson's family.

Sergt. McDermott said a search would be started for the persons to whom the checks were made out. In each case, it was understood, the drafts were written to men.

A mysterious note, written in Pitman shorthand apparently by Davidson, also was found. Late last night, the note had not been transcribed completely and was turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for further examination.

Davidson, his friends said, was an expert shorthand writer. It is believed the note furnished police with several important "leads."

"It gave us some ideas about his private life," said Sergt. McDermott, "but whether it will lead to the actual murderer is another question."

Several suspects, investigators declared, are under surveillance, but the "time isn't ripe" for an arrest.

Commerce Secretary Exhibits Confidence in Trade Future

Roper Visions 'Sound Basis' For Business

By Robert C. Albright.

Weighing business statistics for the last nine months, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper said yesterday he found nothing in the picture to disturb confidence but an "outlook for a safe, sound and progressive future for American business."

His statement corresponded with a rally on the New York stock market, following opening declines. Roper refrained from direct comment on stock market movements other than to say he regarded trade statistics as the "true basis" for business appraisal.

The Commerce Secretary, who backed up the President in his plea for reduced Federal expenditures, said he saw no need for renewed "pump priming" activities by the Government, and declared the President's Chicago speech on international developments should have a "stabilizing influence" on domestic and world trade.

Board Meets Tomorrow.

Roper received reporters while the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council was in session here.

The Federal Reserve Board will receive periodic reports on business conditions in various districts, when the Federal Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve System meets here tomorrow.

The executive committee of the Federal Reserve Board's open-market committee was in conference here yesterday with Secretary Morgenthau. The committee was said to have discussed the Treasury's future borrowing plans, the advisability of short-term financing and methods of meeting the maturity of $300,000,000 of Treasury bills due December 15.

Releases Statistics.

Roper released a detailed analysis of trade statistics for the three business quarters of 1937. Economic indicators, production graphs and trade distribution for the first quarter, he said, "showed a sustained upward movement." He said this movement was less rapid for the second quarter, but the trend continued. Figures for the third quarter, he added, showed that "the rise, while still continuing, was at a more moderate pace."

Asked if Federal "pump priming" activities might again be resorted to, he pointed to the President's announced economy objectives, said Mr. Roosevelt had asked every Government unit to plan in this direction, and declared he had "no reason to believe at this time that so called priming of the Government pump should be necessary."

"The President's plan, as indicated in recent addresses, for reduced expenditures by the Government and a definite program for an early balanced budget, without higher taxes, is another substantial support of our outlook for a safe, sound and progressive future for American business," he said.

He mentioned as other important factors the increased purchasing power of labor through increased pay rolls and enlarged buying power of the farmer through generally abundant crops.

Register or Split, Electric Bond Told

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—Electric Bond & Share Co., controlling $2,500,000,000 of utility companies, must register under the public utilities act of 1935 or divest itself of control of its subsidiaries, declared Robert H. Jackson, Assistant United States Attorney General, today.

Representing the Government before the United States Court of Appeals in opposing the company's demand the act in its entirety be declared unconstitutional, Jackson said:

"Congress clearly has the right and the power to close the mails and other avenues of interstate commerce to those who refuse to obey its constitutional edicts . . . Either Electric Bond & Share must register under the act or get out of interstate commerce."

Good Friday Bomber Sentenced to Chair

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 6 (AP).—Michael Fugmann, convicted of murder in a Good Friday parcel post bombing of 1936, in which three were killed, was sentenced today to die in the electric chair.

President Learned on Trip That West Is Not Interested in Reopening Court Bill.

—By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

WHY President Roosevelt made the two-week trip to the Pacific Northwest which he completed yesterday on his arrival at Hyde Park still remains unexplained. When Mr. Roosevelt started, it was generally thought he was commencing a punitive expedition against those Democratic Senators who opposed him on the court issue. But this did not materialize.

It may be that the President had such a purpose in mind when he started out on his trip, but was suddenly jarred away from his course when on reaching Cheyenne he found that the people of Wyoming had rallied around their Senator, Joseph C. O'Mahoney.

Perhaps, after all, the President wished to see his daughter Anna (although he had seen her in June) and his two delightful grandchildren. But he could have brought all of them East at a fraction of what it cost him to go see them. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt, who loves to travel and meet people, just wanted to look the country over and inspect the mammoth dams being erected in the West, his favorite public works projects.

Or perhaps, as some unkind persons suggested—and it is ironical—the President wished to give his son-in-law, John Boettiger, a boost in his $30,000 a year job as publisher of Hearst's Seattle Post-Intelligencer, for up in the Northwest tip of the country young Mr. Boettiger and the Hearst newspaper get the credit for bringing the President to that section. Imagine Mr. Roosevelt crossing the country to help a Hearst newspaper!

Maybe it was a combination of all these which inspired Mr. Roosevelt to pack his bag and do a rail and automobile journey which totals close to 7,500 miles.

But whatever the purpose of the journey, certain definite tangible results may be chalked up for it:

1. Mr. Roosevelt gave to the whole country, through the press representatives accompanying him, an indisputable demonstration of his personal popularity in all nine States in which he made appearances and talks.

2. He succeeded in isolating himself from the questions of the press during the crucial days of Justice Hugo L. Black's situation and hence was not called on for any comment until the Alabaman, by taking his place on the Supreme Court bench, confronted the country with a fait accompli.

3. The President turned the spotlight on the objectives he seeks to achieve as a result of the hundreds of millions of dollars spent on the Bonneville, Grand Coulee and Fort Peck dams, educated some news reporters and commentators on the merits of those projects and thus earned a more sympathetic hearing for such expenditures.

4. He also educated some of the Washington correspondents as to the necessity for water and land conservation efforts and undertook, with some success, to inculcate into them what he constantly termed the "national viewpoint."

5. Mr. Roosevelt learned at first hand, which must have jolted him in the beginning, that the masses of people—certainly those west of the Mississippi River—do not give a tinker's dam about his Supreme Court reorganization bill and that while they are not hostile to him on that issue they are not sympathetic and positively do not want the subject reopened at this time.

6. Mr. Roosevelt found a prosperous agricultural country—where the land and water resources are good—and one not agitating for a crop-control bill. Yet he indicated he would go ahead with that measure in a special session of Congress.

7. Mr. Roosevelt found an overwhelming, if blind, desire on the part of the masses of people for keeping this country out of war. He was more vigorously applauded for the expression of such sentiments than any other—which made his Chicago speech—pointing out the ineffectiveness of the neutrality policy the more surprising.

8. Judging by applause, he also found that promises of a balanced budget were popular—he never misfired on applause with that one.

Mr. Roosevelt cannot but count his two-week trip as all to the good from his viewpoint. He has really lost nothing. He has gained much. In addition to the results already listed, the trip was worthwhile for Mr. Roosevelt because of the contacts he established with the man in the street and in the field. He is not one to sit around in luxurious private cars or hotel suites. He gets down to the bedrock of the dams, the sagebrush of the plains and the ravished timber of the forest. All of this gives him an understanding of national problems impossible to achieve sitting in the White House.

As one who made that trip with the President in the capacity of an observer, I found it an invaluable experience. Indeed, every President, every Cabinet officer, every member of Congress and every Washington correspondent should be compelled to make such a trip at least once a year.

U.F.W.A. Seeking C.I.O. Showdown

The United Federal Workers of America is soon to have a showdown with its parent, the C. I. O. on the matter of money.

Jacob Baker, one-time New Dealer whom John L. Lewis selected to head the U. F. W. A., will go to Atlantic City next week to give accounting of stewardship and to learn from the C. I. O. in convention assembled just how much money the employe organization gets.

The question of the original subsidy was debated when the U. F. W. A. was formed by order of Lewis some four months ago. Baker subsequently announced the figure at $5,000. Meanwhile, the organization has taken a suite of offices in the Transportation Building and has launched a Nation-wide recruiting campaign.

The nucleus of the organization was 2,500 employes from emergency agencies in the Government, factions which split from the American Federation of Government Employes.

Business Zone At Walsh Home Hotly Opposed

Dupont Circle Residents Ask Board to Reject Plea, Expected to Win.

Rezoning of the Walsh mansion at 2020 Massachusetts avenue encountered stubborn opposition of residents of the fashionable Dupont Circle area yesterday at an all-day hearing before the District zoning commission. Only counsel for the estate of Mrs. Carrie Walsh spoke in favor of converting the abandoned residence into a business building.

The commission came to no decision, but indications are the application will be rejected because of the weight of testimony against it. Hearing on the remaining 17 of 43 cases will be resumed at 10 a. m. today in the board room of the District Building.

One case was decided at once yesterday when no one appeared in defense of a rezoning plan proposed by the commission to change from residential "A" restricted to residential "A" semi-restricted certain properties in the vicinity of Mt. Alto Hospital.

The property is on the east side of Thirty-eighth street between Mt. Alto Hospital and Cathedral avenue, and on Fulton, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets, and Cathedral avenue. Semi-detached residences are mingled with single residences, and the commission sought to permit uniform development of the former.

The Walsh estate proposal was explained by John E. Larson, attorney for the American Security & Trust Co., trustee, who said that the estate had paid $50,000 in taxes and other carrying charges during the last ten years and the only revenue it had received was from the Federal Government during occupancy by the Resettlement Administration.

Among opponents to the rezoning was Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, widow of the famed reaconteur, who was represented by counsel. She maintains a residence at 2107 Massachusetts avenue.

Two other cases instituted by the commission stirred up lengthy arguments from property owners who feared possible losses on speculative investments.

One of these involves a large undeveloped tract in the Takoma section. The changes proposed are in an area bounded on the north by Whittier street and Eastern avenue, on the east by Eastern avenue and Sligo Mill road, and on the south and west by the right of way of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Zoned about 15 years ago, the area has a confusion of zones without regard to present conditions. Residential A zones are adjacent to the railroad, the commission said, and possible residential property is zoned commercially.

C. I. O. Candidate In Detroit Run-off For Mayor's Seat

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 6.—The Committee for Industrial Organization's hopes for gaining control of Detroit's non-partisan city government rested tonight on success of its efforts to corral the 89,620 voters who supported losing mayoralty candidates in yesterday's primary.

Patrick H. O'Brien, indorsed by the C. I. O. in its first direct political effort, polled 99,129 votes, and will contest in the election, November 2, against Richard W. Reading, who led him by 39,000 votes in the primary with 137,984. Three other candidates, John W. Smith, city council president indorsed by the A. F. of L.; Clarence J. McLeod and Ralph A. Philbrook, trailed far behind. Smith got 68,827 votes, McLeod 19,542 and Philbrook 1,251.

The C. I. O. succeeded in naming its five candidates for the nine-member city council to places on the November ballot, although they trailed six incumbent councilmen indorsed by the A. F. of L.

Birth Control Laws Nip 2 Boston Social Leaders

Boston, Oct. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Linda Hawkridge, of Newton, president of the Massachusetts Birth Control League, and Mrs. Caroline C. Davis, of Boston, secretary, were fined $200 each today for violating State birth control laws. They appealed and were released in $500 each.

The women, both socially prominent, were charged with circulating literature stating where information for prevention of pregnancy might be obtained. They were arrested several weeks ago after police raided Boston headquarters of the league.

Federal Works Payroll To Average 1,650,000

By the Associated Press.

WPA intends to employ an average of 1,650,000 persons in the fiscal year ending next June 30, spokesmen for the organization said yesterday.

This average would be well within the 2,000,000-figure, which President Roosevelt declared no longer necessary in a press conference today at Hyde Park, N. Y. Latest WPA figures show that 1,456,915 were employed on September 18.

District Denies Business Levy Burdens Trade

Points to Congress' Power to Legislate for City in Suit Defense.

The District's new business license and gross receipts tax, under which an estimated 18,000 persons and firms will have to pay a flat tax of $10 and two-fifths of 1 per cent of the gross receipts, was defended in District Court yesterday when the District Commissioners, through Assistant Corporation Counsel Jo V. Morgan, contended Congress had the right to pass such legislation for the municipality.

Morgan, seeking to have an injunction suit brought by Howard W. Berry, advertising agency head, dismissed, asked Justice Jennings Bailey to follow the precedent laid down by the United States Court of Appeals which recently ruled against the Potomac Electric Power Co., and in favor of the District in a suit involving many of the same principles of the Berry suit. Berry is contending Congress had no right to levy the business and receipts tax because in so doing the Government was burdening interstate commerce for a purely local purpose.

However, the District contended the tax was not a burden on interstate trade, and that even so, Congress having the exclusive right to legislate for the District, could lawfully pass such legislation.

Richard L. Tedrow, attorney for Berry, pointed out the tax was unfair because, he said, any business with a large turnover but a small profit would be unduly taxed, while any business with a nominal turnover, and a large profit, would be given an advantage. He claimed that as the tax was not uniform, it should be held invalid.

Justice Bailey announced he would make his decision later.

Everyone is a lover of the beautiful in Furniture, and the work of the Old Masters, long since priceless heirlooms may leave one with the thought that authentic copies and skillful adaptations of the outstanding pieces may of necessity be prohibitive in price.

To contradict that thought—and give practical demonstration that the works of these Old Masters still live in productions by worthy successors, who are also carrying on with masterful conception renditions of the new modern trend—is why we want you to accept this invitation.

Under the unique and exceptional Sloane manner of presentation make inspection deliberately, and see just how faithfully the work has been done and how all the charm of the old is definitely preserved by W. & J. Sloane and the few contemporaries who are dedicated to Art in Furniture-making, rather than setting commercialism as the prime consideration.

And, too, you will have a vivid demonstration of what the Sloane Slogan means:

"Always High Grade;

Come and you'll see how easy it is for you to live with the famous old designs made as the Old Masters made them, of genuine cabinet woods without substitution.

A. F. of L. Attorney Suggests Repeal of the Wagner Labor Relations Act

Labor Meeting Hails Guarded Attack on Law

Two Reservations Dilute Recommendation Before Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 6.—American Federation of Labor convention delegates mildly applauded a suggestion today that the federation might well advocate repeal of the Wagner labor disputes act.

Joseph Padway, Milwaukee labor lawyer, made the suggestion with two strings attached.

The law that A. F. of L. President William Green, once called "labor's Magna Charta" should be repealed if the Labor Relations Board attempted to freeze craft unions out of mass production industries and if Congress refused to amend the act to protect craft unions, Padway said.

Board Is Criticized.

Despite yesterday's statement by Chairman J. Warren Madden that the labor board was strictly impartial in the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. fight, criticism of the board continued at today's convention sessions.

After Padway spoke, C. A. Weaver, of Des Moines, Iowa, member of the musicians' union, asked Green whether the convention was justified in believing the labor board was "created for the purpose of promoting the C. I. O."

"Well, not originally," replied Green. "It was created to make men free."

Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, told the convention that the Federation's demand for broadening the social securities program would be met eventually.

The program as it stood, Altmeyer said, was "neither unchangeable nor perfect" but had "met urgent present needs."

The board now is studying proposals to broaden the act's scope and to increase benefits, he said.

Howard Refused Seat.

Other developments:

William R. Trotter, delegate from the printers' union, protested delay in seating Charles P. Howard, C. I. O. secretary and president of the printers' union. The credentials committee refused to seat Howard for the time being after the carpenters' union protested. No hearing has been set.

Rumors President Roosevelt was considering appointment of Michael J. McDonough, defeated for re-election as secretary of the building trades department, as assistant Secretary of Labor went the rounds of the convention hall. The Labor Department post was occupied by Edward F. McGrady until he resigned to take a position with the Radio Corporation of America last month.

The painters' union introduced a resolution calling for the Federal Government to institute "some form of socialized medicine." A recommendation from the resolutions committee for a Federal study of the subject was generally expected.

The damage, Navy officers said, was of comparatively minor nature and could be repaired in a few days.

Mysterious Light in Long-Abandoned House Sets Wixassett Women Adither Over Ghosts

Four times it has been seen now, that eerie light in a deserted house near Wixassett Station where death has come twice in the last two years.

Men of the community say they can't explain it; women of the community on Tuesday night called in the Montgomery County police, but, as Mrs. W. B. Kessler said while wringing her hands yesterday:

"The police just didn't go up in the dark attic where that horrible light is seen."

So the mystery hung over the community yesterday. Mrs. Kessler, who lives within 300 yards of the deserted house, says, "I don't like to believe in signs or in the supernatural, and I wish that light would appear on some side of the house other than the side facing my window."

Light Snow White.

"It was horrible," Mrs. Kessler said, with twitches.

"I have seen it several times. Just last Saturday I saw it from my bathroom window at 10 o'clock. On Tuesday morning I was awakened at 4:30 by the cat. Going to the door, I looked toward the deserted house and there it was," Mrs. Kessler reacted visibly to the memory.

"It was snow white," she said. I never saw such pure whiteness in my life."

The deserted house is one of a row of some five or six dwelings just off the Cabin John car tracks. Trees and creepers afford it secretiveness. A hill slopes from its back porch to the river, the ground is wooded and dark with rocks.

Mrs. Eloise Graham answered the door at one of these houses and said she had seen the light and joined Mrs. Kessler in summoning the police.

At another house, a gentleman who said he was Mr. Leger came to the door, smoking a drousy cigar.

"What light?" inquired Mr. Leger.

Two Deaths in House.

"No, I don't believe in any of this light foolishness. I've got a light on my front gate and I've got a big search light in the house, but I don't know anything about a ghost."

The deserted house was entered. A lady emphasized that two deaths had occurred there. And that all electric current had long been shut off. The attic was easy to enter. It was filled with dust and cob webs. In a corner was a chain. Nearby was a box of dry cell batteries. A pasteboard carton contained some half hundred envelopes from the House of Representatives document room.

"It's the ghost of the Seventy-fifth Congress," someone said. "Maybe they're holding Kluxer meetings out here at night," came the reply. But nothing more tangible than these were found.

"It might be the reflection of light," ventured Mr. Kessler.

"But what window pane is there to reflect on?" said a lady in rebuttal. The attic window is open and its screen would dim the reflection.

Air Purification Termed Next Step For Public Health

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—The next great step in public health, purifying the air the same as milk and water have been rid of diseases, was started at the American Public Health Association here today with announcement of a discovery that deadly streptococcus germs are able to live and float in open air from person to person.

The idea that ventilation is one of the most important practical methods at present in keeping the air free of disease risks was supported by studies presented by Constantin P. Yaglou, assistant professor of industrial hygiene of the Harvard School of Public Health.

He received his bachelor of sacred theology degree and his doctor of canon law degree at Catholic University, Washington, D. C.

Mechanical Nose Sniffs Out Drunks In Test for Police

Baltimore, Oct. 6 (AP).—A mechanical nose took three sniffs today and pronounced one man sober, another intoxicated.

Two sniffs were for a youth who gulped 2 ounces of liquor at a demonstration of the sobriety testing device.

The other was for a fellow subject whose contribution to science consisted of downing four ounces of whisky in a hot stuffy room.

A bit of pink liquid in a tube gave the answers—it grew a shade or so lighter for mild intoxication; colorless for a "real drunk."

Dr. R. N. Harger, of Indiana University, devised the "chemical smeller" and demonstrated it before the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Roosevelt Praises Southeast States Promotion Plan

Atlanta, Oct. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt sent word to Southeastern Governors today that their plan for organized development of this section dovetailed with his national program of regional planning.

L. W. Robert, jr., industrial consultant to the Southeastern Governor's Council, delivered the President's message to a sub-committee of the council here today.

"The President said that our plan for organized development of the Southeast fitted in perfectly with his program for regional planning," Robert reported, as a result of a recent conference with the President, and said that he was tremendously interested in the plan.

Woman Repels Attack in Shop; 2d in Two Days

Same Colored Man Hunted After Being Bitten Twice by Intended Victims.

Police last night sought a powerfully built colored man, who last night attacked a young white woman in the rear of a cleaning establishment in the 2400 block of Eighteenth street northwest. The suspect answers the description of the man who Tuesday night made a similar attack on a white woman in the Aristo cleaning store.

Last night's victim, Sally Robsham, 22, 2111 Nineteenth street northwest, received body bruises and a cut on the mouth when she attempted to beat off the attacker.

Alone in the shop late yesterday afternoon, Miss Robsham told police the colored man entered the store three times and the third time requested her to change a quarter. When she refused, she told police, the man leaped over the counter.

Running to the rear of the store, the girl was cornered by the intruder. Seizing her around the neck, the man tried to force a pillow over her head. Fighting with hands and feet, Miss Robsham managed to grab one of her assailant's fingers and bit it severely.

The colored man loosened his hold and Miss Robsham screamed for help. A passerby, who refused to give his name, heard the scream and rushed into the store. Chasing the attacker for several blocks, the man was outdistanced by the assailant who wore tennis shoes.

The suspect was described by Miss Robsham as about 17 or 18 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, strongly built, weighing about 165 pounds, dressed in tan trousers, gray sweater and tan cap.

The description fits almost perfectly that given to police by Mrs. Marie Wertheim, of the man who attacked her Tuesday night. Mrs. Wertheim sustained a fractured wrist when she attempted to resist her attacker.

Police investigating the case believe the wounds inflicted by Mrs. Wertheim and Miss Robsham will assist them in apprehending the attacker.

Informed sources forecast that the Champaign (Ill.) flier would be given a death penalty. The sentence, however, would be accompanied, it was said, either by a full pardon or by a recommendation of clemency from Gen. Francisco Franco.

Rome, Oct. 6 (U.P.).—Signora Benito Mussolini, whose 20-year-old son, Bruno, has gone to Spain to join the insurgent air force, told friends tonight she would have prevented him from embarking on the adventure if she had been in Rome.

Il Duce consented to the adventurous youth's plan only at the last moment, it was said. Friends of the family said Signora Mussolini was distraught and that when Bruno returns home his parents will impose severe restrictions on his restlessness.

Tabler Will Seek Federal Aid for Widening Crain Highway

Funds Lacking For Work Now, Delegation Told

Elimination of Hazard No. 1 of Listed Improvements.

The State of Maryland once possessed finer highways than any other State in the Nation. Now, because of political bickerings and executive red tape, she stands twenty-fifth on the list. Believing that safety ought to stand ahead of the interests of politics, The Post presents today the fifth of a series of articles explaining the situation.

By Joseph M. Mathias.

Approval of the United States Bureau of Public Roads to use Federal funds for immediate widening of Crain highway will be sought, Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the Maryland roads commission, told a delegation of officials from the five southern Maryland counties at a hearing in Baltimore yesterday.

Although he assured the delegation that Crain highway was "No. 1 on the list of road improvements in the State," Dr. Tabler declared that at present the only funds available are those appropriated by the last Legislature to match Federal grants for new construction.

The roads commission head said he already had approached officials of the United States Public Roads Bureau with the view of having the widening of Crain highway classed as new construction. He promised to continue his efforts along this line.

Blandford Heads Group.

The delegation was headed by Joseph H. Blandford, of Clinton, Md., a member of the county commissioners of Prince Georges County, who presented to Dr. Tabler a petition bearing signatures of 1,500 residents of southern Maryland.

Blandford declared:

"As we know, there have been a large number of fatal accidents and much property damage on the Crain highway—but the saddest thing to think of is the long waiting list of casualties in accidents yet to occur on the road."

Pointing out that Crain highway was the only arterial highway in the State which was only 15 feet wide for a considerable distance, Blandford urged that the road be widened immediately to at least 20 feet.

Traffic Greatly Increased.

Senator Alan Coad, of St. Marys County, chairman of the finance committee of the upper House of the Maryland Legislature, declared that traffic over Crain highway had increased "a hundred fold" since it was constructed in 1927.

Harvey Bailey, president of the board of county commissioners of St. Marys County stated that 90 per cent of the produce from St. Marys County is carried over the Crain highway.

Rudolph Carrico, a member of the State Legislature from Charles County, said that when two passenger cars passed on the narrow highway there was only about a foot clearance between them.

A suggestion that the 15-foot section of the road be widened immediately by the construction of specially treated gravel shoulders was voiced by J. A. Bromley, county roads engineer for Anne Arundel County.

Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, of Laurel, Md., a member of the Prince Georges County commissioners, urged that widening of Crain highway be classed as an emergency project.

Tragedy Started Agitation.

Other speakers included Briscoe Gray, of Calvert County, president of the Southern Maryland Society; George W. Joy, former school superintendent of St. Marys County; Benedict Love, of the American Legion Post, No. 54, of St. Marys County; Thomas J. Cullimore, president of the county commissioners of Anne Arundel County; Thomas Hutchins, a member of the commissioners of Anne Arundel County; F. R. Bolton, a commissioner of Charles County and Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the Washington branch of the American Automobile Association.

Agitation for widening of Crain highway began when seven members of the family of Henry A. Lammers, of Laurel, Md., were killed in an accident a mile south of the intersection of Defense Highway last July.

Dr. Tabler said yesterday that an investigation has shown the condition of the road was not responsible for the crash.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

The player whose bridge philosophy can be summed up in the old saw, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," will never go very far at bridge. Very often it is logical to jeopardize one trick as a gilt-edged investment toward the making of two tricks. That was the case in today's hand.

West, dealer.

West opened the Ace and King of hearts, then shifted to the King of spades. When the Queen dropped from declarer, he continued with the spade Ace. Declarer ruffed with the Queen and led a low trump to dummy's Jack, then ruffed another spade, repeating this process to ruff away dummy's last spade. A low club was now led to dummy's Ace, and a club returned. East, on lead with the King, had nothing but a heart to return. This, of course, allowed declarer to discard a club from one hand while ruffing in the other, thus saving a club loser.

East was not conscious of having helped the enemy, but he had done so nevertheless. A very simple and quite logical play would have increased the penalty by 200 points. All East had to do was play the club King on the Ace! As a matter of fact this play would have risked very little. The contract was already safely defeated; if declarer had the Queen and Jack of clubs the unblock of the King would, it is true, cost a trick, but surely this was a remote possibility. The play had revealed the distribution of all hands, and West had been shown to have started with five clubs. If these included the Queen and ten, the unblocking play would gain a trick. Even if declarer had the Queen and West the Jack, nothing would be lost by the unblock—the defenders would still win the only club trick available to them.

As I have stated repeatedly, a large proportion of all elimination and throw-in plays owe their success to the co-operation of the defenders who hate to part with big cards.

'Perfect Crime' Leader Pleads Guilty Here

Case of Alfred H. Brauer Referred to Probation Officer.

A 22-year-old former college student, who studied crime stories so he could perpetrate the "perfect crime," was one step nearer the end of his career yesterday when Alfred H. Brauer pleaded guilty to two robbery charges before Justice Joseph W. Cox in District Court. Because he had no prior record, the cases were referred to the probation officer for a report before sentence is pronounced.

Harry G. Smith, said by police to have been the man who carried out Brauer's carefully laid plot to rob the S. & W. Cafeteria last August, meanwhile has entered a plea of not guilty. A third who was indicted in connection with the cafeteria job, William P. Allen, 30-year-old cab driver, had previously admitted his guilt and is awaiting sentence.

In addition to the theft of approximately $1,300 from the cafeteria, Brauer admitted he participated in the theft of $369 from a clerk of the Sanitary Grocery Co.

In the cafeteria robbery, police said Brauer planned all the details, while Smith entered the place and staged the affair. Allen was waiting outside in his cab to effect the getaway.

It was through conflicting stories from Allen that police soon unearthed the clews that first led to Brauer's arrest, and then Allen and Smith. Smith was arrested in Miami, where he had gone soon after the robbery, police said.

Western Union Loses In Chain Letter Suit

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 6 (AP).—The Western Union Telegraph Co. lost today its move to shift from State to Federal courts the suits of two men to collect from it $30,610,000 in penalties for delivering chain messages in the pay-a-dime craze which swept the Nation two years ago.

Andrew W. Mulligan, of Camden, and William F. Zwirner, of Merchantville, seek to collect the money as common informers under New Jersey's gaming law, which forbids participation in lotteries.

Filene Bequeaths $2,000,000 Estate to 'Good Will Fund'

Boston, Oct. 6 (AP).—The will of Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant-philanthropist, filed today, gave the greater part of an estate exceeding $2,000,000 to the "Good Will Fund," a recently incorporated charitable and educational foundation.

Filene, who died recently in Paris, previously placed the bulk of his fortune in trust for the Twentieth Century Fund, an economic research foundation he organized in 1919. Securities set aside for that fund were valued at between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000.

Numerous small bequests were left to relatives. Filene never married.

Neutrality Act Invocation Demanded Here at Conference.

Organizations and individuals seeking application of the neutrality act in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war, undeterred by a chorus of praise for President Roosevelt's newly enunciated policy of co-operation, yesterday charged he "points the American people down the road that led to the World War" and to "fascism, communism, depression and debt."

This was the phrasing of a statement issued by the six peace organizations which have campaigned for months for invocation of the neutrality act. They are the National Council for Prevention of War, World Peaceways, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Fellowship of Reconciliation, Emergency Peace Campaign and Committee on Militarism in Education.

The views of the six peace groups were echoed at length in the first session of a three-day peace conference at the Washington Hotel, held under auspices of the Council for Prevention of War.

"We agree with the President that the disease of war should be quarantined," their statement continued. "But the only protective quarantine for the people of this country is the invocation of the neutrality law . . . Unless the neutrality law is applied, the President has in his hands a blank check on which he can write whatever foreign policy he sees fit at whatever cost to the American people."

During the morning session William W. Lockwood, jr., of the Institue of Pacific Relations, said the integrity of China is and always has been the chief objective of United States policy in the Far East.

Discussion at last night's session centered around organization of local peace groups, with Paul Harris, jr, as chairman. Today's discussion topics include "Legislative Next Steps in Keeping Our Country Out of War," "Peaceful Change" and "The Future Development of the Peace Movement."

More than 100 delegates are attending the conference. Foreign countries represented are Great Britain, Holland and the Philippines. A Japanese student attended yesterday's meetings.

Striking Drivers To Picket Stores Downtown Today

Determined to obtain a wages and hours agreement from the Merchants Transfer & Storage Co., striking truck drivers and "jumpers" today will begin picketing downtown stores and other business clients of the company, union officials said yesterday.

The picketing plan was announced after representatives of Teamsters' Local No. 639 voluntarily visited Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendant of police, to disclaim responsibility for the series of incidents Tuesday when several merchants' trucks were robbed of ignition keys.

"We are perfectly willing to begin negotiating for a working agreement at any time, but it is up to the company to take the lead in calling a conference," an official spokesman for the union said.

The union is demanding increased wages for drivers and helpers, a 48-hour working week and extra pay for overtime.

Warm, Well-Fed Mine Strikers Prepare for Long Siege in Pit

Lansford, Pa., Oct. 6.—Well fed and warmed by three tiny stoves, 43 coal-blackened miners huddled deep in a dark tunnel today, determined to sit there until their demands for higher wages were met, while fellow workers discussed the possibility of a general strike.

More than 1,300 feet below the surface, the men—all married—munched sandwiches and played pinochle, while union leaders and the Lehigh Navigation Coal Co. pondered what to do about it.

Enough food for two days was brought to the mouth of the Coal-lale Colliery, in eastern Pennsylvania, center of the largest anthracite-producing region in the world. Relatives carried baskets of coffee, milk, potatoes, cold meat, bread and butter and the company lowered the stuff in a cage.

All night the miners stayed there in hand-fashioned bunks after they delivered their ultimatum: Payment by the yard on coal and dirt removed in opening the new eighth level rather than the daily wage rate of $6.78.

The company replied: "This method of mining has been in effect in the Panther Valley 30 years."

Then the company threw up a barrier at the mouth of the level, permitting no one to enter. The other levels of the mine, employing nearly 1,200, continued unaffected by the "strike," the company said.

Md. Motorist Beats Woman, Tries to Run Down Officer

Police last night broadcast a lookout for the driver of an automobile with Maryland tags, who first beat a woman, then attempted to run down a policeman who came in response to her screams.

The policeman, H. G. McDougall, was patrolling his beat near Eighteenth and R streets northwest when he heard the woman's cries. At the street intersection he saw the man, in an automobile, striking the woman.

When he approached, the driver shoved the woman aside, stepped on the gas, and tried to run down McDougall and sped away. Commandeering an automobile, Policeman McDougall gave chase. He lost the driver in a traffic jam, where the latter speeded through a red light. The woman had disappeared when the officer returned to the scene.

Succeeding Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, woh is retiring, Admiral Brown will take over his duties February 1, naval officials said. He will be succeeded as commander of the training detachment of the fleet by Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson, now on duty here as a member of the general board.

Entering Annapolis in 1898, Admiral Brown was attached to the U. S. S. San Francisco upon his graduation. From 1915 until 1918 he was on duty in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations, and then was ordered to Queenstown, Ireland, for duty with the destroyer fleet.

Admiral Brown returned to Washington three years later and was attached to the office of Naval Operations, Navy Department. He was naval aide to President Hoover and commander of the Presidential yacht Mayflower, from 1926 until 1929, and was again on duty at the White House three years ago.

Commanded Summer Cruises.

Assuming command of the training squadron scouting force in may, 1936, Admiral Brown has been in charge of the midshipmen's summer practice cruises.

After serving as instructor in the Department of Physics and Chemistry at the academy, Admiral Brown was ordered to duty in connection with the training of the crew of the battleship Montana, and served in that ship for two years.

Admiral Brown completed the course at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., in 1921, and 11 years later served as its chief of staff. He is a holder of the Navy Cross, the Sapinsh Campaign Medal, the Philippine Campaign Medal, the Cuban Pacification Medal, the Mexican Service Medal and the Victory Medal with Destroyer Clasp.

Admiral Sellers, who has been superintendent of the Naval Academy since 1934, will retire March 1 upon reaching the retirement age of 64. He was appointed commander, battleships, Battle Fleet, with the rank of vice admiral in 1932, and in June, 1933 was ordered to duty as commander-in-chief of the fleet with rank of admiral.

After serving as aide to the commander-in-chief of the Asiatic Fleet, Admiral Sellers was on duty in the Bureau of Navigation in 1907. He attended the Naval War Cillege immediately before the war and then was placed in command of the U. S. S. Wisconsin.

Secretary Denby's Aide

Admiral Sellers served as aide to Secretary of the Navy Denby in 1921, and seven years later was appointed Judge Advocate General.

He holds the Spanish Campaign Medal, the Philippine Medal, the Cuban Pacification Medal, the Victory Medal with destroyer clasp, and the Second Nicaraguan Campaign Medal.

After Admiral Brown assumes office, Admiral Johnson will take over duties as commander of the training detachment. He has been on duty with the general board for the last two years.

In 1927 he was appointed director of naval intelligence, and then was designated president of the board of elections in Nicaragua, with additional duty as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Nicaragua. For his services while in that country, Admiral Johnson was awarded the Nicaraguan Medal of Merit.

Fascism to Rule World, Duce Says

Milan, Italy, Oct 6 (Wednesday) (AP).—Fascism is going to sweep the world whether the world likes it or not, Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia declared today.

The newspaper aggressively predicted the triumph of "twentieth century fascism" over nineteenth century capitalism, parliamentary democracy, socialism, communism, liberalism and certain vacillating Catholicism, with which sooner or later we shall deal in our own manner."

Some Fascists saw in the article an answer to the Chicago speech of President Roosevelt that peace-loving countries must "quarantine" belligerent nations. The article, however, did not mention Roosevelt's speech.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Tontine Income.

Data from a study of the tontine income from the fiscal year 1931 to January 31, 1937, show that total toneine contributions, less refunds, amounted for the period to $32,037,248.17, the American Federation of Government Employes has been advised by Robert H. Alcorn, chairman of the joint conference on retirement, with which the A. F. G. E. is affiliated.

The tontine is much discussed by Government employes, points out the A. F. G. E., with an explanation that it amounts to $1 a month for each employe and goes to the retirement fund, ostensibly as a sort of service charge which is not refunded except in the case of involuntary separation from the service.

Alcorn's figures show that tontine deductions come to about $5,000,000 a year, the total for the period having been $33,175,371.11 before the refunds of approximately $1,138,122.94 were made. "The figure for refunds is in part an estimate, as no record of refunds was kept prior to 1935, when the Civil Service Commission took over administration of the retirement fund," it was said in explanation of the difficult subject. The tontine amounts to 16.52 per cent of total deductions for retirement, on the average.

"These figures regarding the tontine feature of the present retirement law are beyond the expectation or imagination of anyone and are indeed astounding," Alcorn comments.

And for the human side of this tedious subject—Alcorn discovered that the oldest annuitant is a Georgia colored man, aged 117, and that the youngest, a disability case, is a person only 26 years of age. The largest annuities paid are $1,590 and $1,479; the smallest is $133 per annum.

Goblins Dept.

Halloween always has started them planning, far in advance. Now comes the United Federal Workers of America with some goblinish plans for the occasion. A gala costume ball is being arranged by Local 10 (Social Security Board) for the evening of Saturday, October 30, in the Willard Hotel. Dancing will continue from 10 to 1 a. m. You may appear in costume only if you prefer.

Eurythmics.

The Interior Department Recreation Association makes this very intimate inquiry:

"Are you overweight? Are you underweight? Do you walk well? Is your posture good enough to insure wearing your clothes well? Do you have 'stenographer's spread?' Does the back of your neck and the space across your shoulders ache?" Then, asks the association of those qualifying under these questions:

"Would you like to do something about it?"

If so, call Miss Evelyn S. Adams, chairman, entertainment committee, I. D. R. A., exchange 3685. In the offing is a class, to be held twice a week, in the activity space adjoining the cafeteria, arrange for those interested in dance technique, particularly such exercises as would regulate weight, insure good posture, etc. Anyone who is a member of the I. D. R. A. may join; there is no charge.

The first meeting will be held at 4:30 o'clock Monday in the activity space.

Field Facts.

The completion of a Nation-wide study of municipal and county parks by the National Park Service and the National Recreation Association is announced by Secretary Ickes. The National Park Service has published a report on the study under tile of "Municipal and County Parks in the United States 1935" . . . During the drought year, 1936, nearly 250,000 forest fires occurred in the United States, causing an estimated damage of $54,000,000. National Fire Prevention Week—now being observed—brings attention to the huge and largely preventable fire losses suffered particularly each year in the national forests . . . Wheaton, Ill., Lodge, No. 353, A. F. G. E., claims a distinction: It has members from 4 counties and 11 towns, and perhaps the greatest territorial coverage of any lodge in the national organization. It expects soon to reach four or five more towns in its embrace. Even now some members have to travel as far as 50 miles to a lodge meeting . . . A flying squirrel has made its home near the ranger station in Redwood Meadow, Sequoia National Park, California; the squirrel is inordinately fond of uncooked spaghetti, the rangers have written their bosses in Washington.

Appeal: David R. Glass, charter president, A. F. G. E., issues an appeal to all lodges that have not submitted their constitutions to the national office for approval since September, 1936, to send them in at once. Some lodges, he reminds, sent in only one copy of their constitutions; these lodges should send in another copy at once, he says. For several months, Glass has engaged in examination of the lodge constitutions to check them for form and content, making certain they do not conflict with the constitutions of the A. F. G. E. and its parent, the A. F. of L.

Roosevelt Talk To Open Charity Drive in U. S.

398 Cities Participate in Campaign for Human Needs Agencies.

A 250-station broadcast by President Roosevelt, October 18, will inaugurate this year's mobilization for human needs in 398 cities, officials in charge said yesterday.

Washington is among these cities. The President's address will be carried by the National and Columbia broadcasting organizations, Charles P. Taft, chairman of the mobilization, said. It will be followed by a campaign to arouse public interest in the 8,500 civic, health and welfare agencies which benefit from the mobilization.

The 398 cities, representing two-thirds of the country's urban population, will raise community funds to maintain their private health and welfare services. These organizations, which are sponsored by nonsectarian agencies, provide hospitalization, public health nursing, child care, family welfare and other community services.

New Chicago Bridge Is Largest of Type

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP).—Chief Engineer Ralph H. Burke, of the Chicago Park District, said the Outer Drive Bridge over the Chicago River which President Roosevelt came here to dedicate today is the largest double leaf bascule bridge in the world.

It is 331 feet long, 108 feet wide with two 40-foot roadways and 14-foot sidewalks. It marks the realization of a 30-year dream of civic planners for linking the North and South sides with a lakefront boulevard by-passing the tangled Loop traffic.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv

Pittman Urges 'Ostracism' to Subdue Japan

Says Quarantine Would Stop China Invasion in 30 Days.

By the United Press.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 6—Japan's invasion of China can be stopped in 30 days without a shot being fired, Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, said tonight.

"It is up to Great Britain and the other signatories of the Nine-Power Pact guaranteeing China's territorial integrity to respond unequivocally to President Roosevelt's challenge," Pittman declared.

"The neutrality act," he added, "was intended solely to eliminate certain causes that might lead us into a foreign war. What is required now is a quarantine to prevent spread of the war disease and stamp it out."

War Not Necessary.

War is not necessary to accomplish this end, Pittman said.

"The quarantine would be successful in itself in stopping the Japanese invasion of China within 30 days," he added.

The Nevada Senator pointed out that the United States purchased nearly 50 per cent of Japan's raw silk output and that Japan is dependent upon this country for a large share of scrap iron and other war materials.

"Let the civilized governments which are backed by 90 per cent of the people of the world ostracize Japan," he said in an interview with the United Press. "Let them refuse to have any dealings with the country. Let them refuse to continue any commercial or credit relations with Japan, and there need not be a single shot fired.

More Powerful Than Army.

"Such action is more powerful than the Army or Navy of the United States. No government can conduct war under such ostracism."

Pittman contended no changes were necessary in the present neutrality act.

"Great Britain is more directly affected by Japan's aggression than is the United States or any other country," he said. "Great Britain backed down in 1932 and left our Government out on a limb."

"Our Government can no longer refrain from asserting the facts and publicly condemning Japan. Our Government, however, has gone as far as it can until the other governments that are responsible come out of the brush and assume their part of the responsibilities."

Wheeler Issues Warning.

St. Paul, Oct. 6 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, today warned against action by the United States Government which would draw this country into war.

Senator Wheeler's warning was given during comment on President Roosevelt's address at Chicago in which the President urged "positive endeavors to preserve peace."

"Mere words," Senator Wheeler said, "will have no effect on Japan, Germany and Italy. I concur entirely with the President's reference to the seriousness of the international situation. But, I hope no action will be taken by this Government which is going to mean that America is going to be drawn into war."

the same objective as the League," was formulated independently.

French Think It's Fine.

Paris (Thursday), Oct. 7 (AP).—A French foreign office spokesman today bespoke "unanimous and unqualified" approval in France of the United States State Department's announcement its conclusions on Japan's action in China were in accord with those of the League of Nations Assembly.

"Magnificent! Splendid! Fine!" he declared.

"There is no doubt how that statement is received in France. It draws the unanimous and unqualified approval not only of the French government, but of the entire French people.

"That is one of the best things we have heard in a long time.

"France's whole foreign policy is based on the League and it is only natural we are delighted at such a statement from the democracy on the other continent."

Austria Approves Talk.

Vienna (Thursday), Oct. 7 (AP).—The American declaration on the Sino-Japanese conflict was termed a definite contribution to world stability in semiofficial Austrian quarters today.

A chancellery spokesman said:

"That the United States is in accord with League principles comes as an expression of confidence that is welcome and heartening to a country which upholds League ideals."

4TH FOLO —TOKYO

Italy Feels for Spain.

Rome (Thursday), Oct. 7 (AP).—American condemnation of Japan as a treaty violator in China today fell sharply athwart an Italian tendency to justify Japanese activity.

The Italian government has not pronounced itself officially on the undeclared war in the Far East and responsible officials were silent on the declaration issued in Washington, pending receipt of the text, but there have been various indications of Italian attitude.

The latest of these appeared yesterday in Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, of Milan, which declared "we fully understand and justify" Japanese efforts at expansion.

Stimson Assails Exports as Helping Japan Wage War

Chinese who are as keen, capable and honest in business as they are peaceful as neighbors.

History of "Open Door" Policy Is Recalled.

During the past century when the age of steam and electricity brought the modern Western world into close contact with the Far East, China was at first regarded as an easy prey for the imperialistic ambitions of the more warlike nations. During the close of the nineteenth century a scramble commenced among such nations to seize and divide up her territory. The effort produced a great rebellion in China known as the Boxer Rebellion. At this juncture our own Nation, the United States, successfully put forward a policy designed to arrest this scramble and its disastrous consequences. John Hay, as our Secretary of State, succeeded, with the warm concurrence of Great Britain, in pledging the other nations to an "open door" policy toward China. This policy was based upon two principles: (1) Equality of commercial opportunity among all nations dealing with China, and (2) As necessary to that equality, the preservation of China's territorial and administrative integrity.

Twenty years later, after the downfall of the imperial government of China and the effort of the Chinese to set up a republican form of government were again producing civil war and chaotic conditions in China, our government again stepped forward at the Washington conference in 1921 and succeeded in having the principles of the open door policy of Mr. Hay embodied in a formal treaty to all of the nations having possessions in the Far East, including Japan. This became known as the "Nine-Power Treaty." All of its signatories agreed:

"1. To respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

"2. To provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government.

"3. To use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China.

"4. To refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly states and form countenancing action inimical to the security of such states."

15 Nations Have Agreed To Uphold Treaty.

This was one of the most admirable and far-sighted treaties in the history of modern civilization. It has been joined in not only by ourselves, the British Empire, China and Japan, but also by France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, Portugal, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Mexico and Bolivia. Germany also signed it, though her parliament has not yet ratified it. It at once stabilized the post-war jealousies and fluctuations in that part of the world.

The United States and Great Britain agreed to limit the size of their fleets and to refrain from further fortifications in the Far East in reliance upon the Japanese agreement to leave China alone and thus to preserve the opportunities of other nations for peaceful commerce with China.

The treaty was based upon a recognition of the importance of giving China a free hand in her gigantic task of economic and political reorganization, and constituted a deliberate policy of renunciation of the aggression against her during that process. It represented a common faith that only by such a process under the protection of such an agreement could the fullest interest not only of China but of all nations who had intercourse with her best be served.

Furthermore, this treaty correctly represented the personal attitude of the American people themselves toward China and our sympathy with and interest in her growth and future. For many years our people have been conducting in China the greatest humanitarian and educational effort which has ever been unofficially conducted by the people of one great nation toward another.

American Assistance To Churches, Schools Cited.

From hundreds of American towns and cities thousands of Christian missionaries and American educators and scientists have gone to devote their lives to the assistance of China and the Chinese people on their new entry into the modern world. By American sacrifice and American money, colleges, schools, hospitals and churches have been built throughout Chinese territory in its most remote and inaccessible portions.

Simultaneously in scores of our own schools and colleges for over half a century we have been receiving thousands of eager Chinese students and educating them according to American social and political principles. The personnel of the Nationalist government of China today shows marked results of these American efforts. Many of her leading statesmen, directly or indirectly, have been influenced by our work and principles.

For ten years China remained in lawful and recognized occupation of her territory. During that time Japan, being then herself under the government and leadership of statesmen of liberal and responsible views, was faithful to her treaty obligations and maintained toward China a policy of moderation and international good citizenship. Unfortunately the historical background of Japan was entirely different from that of China. Ninety years ago Japan was a purely military autocracy organized upon feudal lines of the medieval ages. And although during the past century she has made marvelous and gigantic strides in the technical arts, in commerce and industrialization; although she adopted a constitution with parliamentary features and has been extending suffrage among her people, she was far from having reached the stage of liberal democracy. For seven centuries prior to 1850 her privileged class had been that of the soldier and underneath the veneer of her modern parliamentarianism could be found military leaders, cherishing grandiose ambitions for military conquests as well as a general population which was very sensitive to the appeal of military fanaticism.

Depression Brought Imperial Opportunity.

To such imperialist leaders in Japan the depression of 1930 brought their opportunity. They had long cherished plans for a military exploitation of China and on September 18, 1931, defying the civil leaders of their own government, the Japanese army seized Manchuria. Within three months they had torn away from China provinces having an aggregate territory as large as Germany and France combined and which were occupied by a population of 30,000,000 of Chinese. A few weeks later in January, 1932, a Japanese expeditionary force attacked Shanghai, aiming a blow at the very center of China's territory and commerce. But meeting an entirely unexpected, courageous and stubborn resistance by the Chinese Nineteenth Route Army, as well as with vigorous protests from the American Government and the League of Nations, and possibly because the total American fleet was held united at Hawaii on the flank of the Japanese aggression, Japan in a few months withdrew her forces from Shanghai with her objective unattained.

Since then there has ensued a four-year interval during which significant changes have occurred. In Japan militarism has consolidated its hold upon the government partly by a campaign of terrorism, which involved the assassination of the moderate Japanese statesmen, and partly by the appeal which the successful military conquest in Manchuria has made to such an emotional population as the Japanese.

With militarism thus fortified at home, Japan has boldly claimed an economic and political hegemony over China which is in complete disregard of her former promises in the nine-power treaty. Simultaneously she has been pushing forward partly disguised military and political steps to effectuate it. She has instigated attempts to break away some of the northern provinces of China proper and to form in them separate autonomous governments. She has engineered invasions by Manchukuoan troops into inner Mongolia.

Chinese Resistance Steadily Stiffened.

In these steps she has not been very successful and has found the Chinese resistance to her aggression steadily stiffened. Under the cautious but skillful leadership of Chiang Kai-shek and inspired by the dangers which now so clearly confront them, the people of China have been making unprecedented progress toward the achievement of national unity and administrative co-operation, and this fact has not escaped the notice of Japan.

Simultaneously events have been occurring in the outside world which might well make Japan think her opportunity had arrived for a new attack on China. The Fascist dictators of Italy and Germany have boldly and successfully carried through coups involving in Ethiopia, the Rhineland and Spain acts of treaty violation and indefensible aggression. On the other hand, the peaceful democracies of the world, being absorbed with the work of recuperation from the depression and other consequences of the great war, have yielded to these lawless acts of the dictators with a lack of their customary spirit.

In Britain and America, usually in the van of matters of international morality, the people have seemingly been smitten by a temporary seizure of nervous "jitters." This has been excusable in Britain, faced as she has been, and is now, with an extremely perilous European condition within range of her home cities. But in America, occupying the most safe and defensible position in the world, there has been no excuse except faulty reasoning for the wave of ostrich-like isolationism which has swept over us and for the erroneous form of neutrality legislation which has threatened to bring upon us in the future the very dangers of war which we now are seeking to avoid.

Internal Disorders Hampering Russia.

Finally, last winter in Russia, the one nation whose great and growing power lies within reach of North China, and which is feared by Japan, there occurred domestic incidents which were widely interpreted in the outside world as evidencing grave internal disorders.

Evidently taking advantage of these conditions, Japan has struck again, aiming both at North China as far as the Yellow River, and also at the center of China at Shanghai. No excuse worthy of a moment's consideration has been given for the attack. On the contrary, the statements emanating from Tokyo make abundantly clear that there is no such excuse. The Chinese government is denounced as infamous for not yielding to Japan's wishes in North China, and the announcement is made in the press that the attack will continue until the government at Nanking is destroyed.

The methods of the attack also indicate that this is the objective. China's coasts are blocked and her shipping seized and a widespread campaign of bombarding the civilian Chinese population, huddled into great defenseless cities and remote from any military movement or objective, is put into effect. These steps make clear a deliberate and systematic attempt by Japan by a general campaign of terrorism practiced upon the civilian population to force the Chinese government to yield.

Making all allowances for imperfect information, the general scope of what Japan is attempting is abundantly clear. We can also forecast some of the effects which her attempt may have upon the outside world, including ourselves.

In general Japan is trying to take control of the development of modern China and to twist its form and nature to suit her own aims, both political and economic. She is trying to develop China in a way which is the exact opposite of the purpose and policy of the Open Door and the Nine-Power Treaty. Japan makes no secret of this. We do not have to guess. We have a perfectly frank exposition of her plan in what she has already done in Manchukuo and North China.

Commercial Monopoly Held Chief Aim.

She does not contemplate "the preservation of China's territorial and administrative integrity." She is actually engaged in carving up China's territory and herself taking over China's administration. She does not propose equality of commercial opportunity among all nations dealing with China. She is seeking to monopolize that opportunity and has already taken effective steps to do so in Manchukuo.

She is thus trying completely to transform China's own business methods and character and culture and to dominate them to her own national ends. Furthermore, she is not seeking to do this by persuasion or education or other peaceful means but by force and terrorism of the most brutal and barbarous kind.

Japan is not a good colonizer even of backward races. Her colonizing methods have been recently described by an able student of the Far East:

"What capacity she possesses for construction is counterbalanced by a lack in the intangibles of ruling. Her notorious psychological deficiencies have never been more conspicuous. . . . Not only are the inhabitants of Manchukuo, unreconstructedly hostile. . . . Japan has not the capacity to win loyalty by sharing benefits and rewards. . . . Japanese can command but they cannot cooperate." These words were from "The Price of Japanese Imperialism," by Nathaniel Pfeffer, in Foreign Affairs, October, 1937.

Financial Resources Lacking For Colonies.

Japan has not even the financial resources which are notoriously necessary for colonial exploitation. Her efforts in Manchukuo have already strained her own national resources to the uttermost. Before she made the present attack, her unstable economic condition was known to all students. Her credit was impaired, her currency in jeopardy and her foreign trade, upon which she was dependent for the necessary exchange to carry on her imports, had been curtailed by drastic restrictions. The conditions of her industrial workers have been becoming progressively more difficult. Real wages in Japan are nearly 20 per cent below 1931, while the cost of living has risen by 25 per cent.

In short, this headstrong little nation, herself on the verge of bankruptcy from the efforts of her previous adventure in Manchukuo, is seeking to recoup herself by a brutal attempt to conquer and exploit a population over four times her size and composed of men who are individually as brave and tenacious as her own people and who are at least their equal in mentality and civilization.

In such a situation what is the forecast for us and the rest of the world? Japan probably cannot succeed in permanently dominating the whole or even a major portion of China. But she may temporarily force into her armies large masses of the good fighting power of the Chinese to use in making trouble elsewhere in the world. And certainly she can disastrously embarrass and retard the efforts which China has been making for development in her own peaceful, commercial way.

Japan thus can cause immense loss to all nations commercially interested in China and for a time she may make herself a stronger military power than she is at present, with the result of causing great apprehension and danger in the area of the North Pacific. For a considerable time, if Japan is able to proceed in her own way, there will be a great storm center in Northeastern Asia, with grave possible threats and disturbances to us and our own interests. For our Pacific States already occupy ringside seats at this battle.

Such, in brief, is the situation across the Pacific which confronts our Nation. It is one of those acute international crises which force the people of this Nation to think hard and clearly on subjects which they are not accustomed to deal with in normal times. Our American people are aroused and angry at the callous brutality of the Japanese. There is apparently no difference of opinion in their minds as to the merits of the controversy. Their abhorrence of injustice and oppression causes them immediately and universally to sympathize with China, but they do not see how anything can be done about it. They seem to be getting steadily more angry without knowing whether there is any proper outlet for their indignation.

No one knows better than I the difficulties which confront our Government in such a situation. No one has a keener desire than I to avoid making more difficult the position of my successor in the State Department, for whom I have the greatest respect. But in every democratic nation the task of those entrusted with guiding its course in such a crisis would be made easier or harder accordingly as the attitude of the public is intelligent and far-sighted or the reverse. I therefore conceive it to be a time when every effort should be made by citizens to contribute to the general discussion which is taking place in such a way as to help the understanding of his fellows to the end that it may be intelligent and far-sighted. It is with this object that I venture these reflections upon the subject. In them I shall continue to remain as far away as possible in the realm of generalities. It is usually best for the Government itself to propose specific measures without being hampered by specific proposals from the public.

In the first place, let me make it perfectly clear that, in my opinion, this is not a case where there should be any thought of America sending armies to participate in a strife that is going on in Asia. Not only is such a course probably militarily impossible; not only would be abhorrent to our people, but to attempt it would do much more harm than good.

The future character of the civilization of Asia must be determined, whether peacefully or by war, by the men of Asia themselves. If China is to be saved from domination by force, it must be saved by the courage and sacrifice of armed Chinese men. The problem of the preservation of China's peaceful civilization cannot be solved by the armed intervention of the Occident.

Democracies Lending Invaluable Assistance.

But that is very far from saying that the only alternative is inaction or a passive and shameful acquiescence in the wrong that is now being done. The lamentable fact is that today the aggression of Japan is being actively assisted by the efforts of men of our own Nation and men of the other great democracy in the world—the British Commonwealth of Nations. It is not only being actively assisted, but our assistance is so effective and predominant, that, without it even today, the aggression would in all probability be promptly checked and cease.

Let me explain this and make it absolutely clear. Japan's position as a war-making nation is far from being self-contained. She is peculiarly dependent upon the outside world for her ability to attack China. While she has ample facilities for manufacturing weapons of all kinds, she is extraordinarily lacking in the raw materials with which to carry on such manufactures. In that respect she is extremely vulnerable. She has no supplies of oil worthy of the name. She has no supplies of rubber whatever. She has very little iron ore—about one-seventh of what she uses even in peace times, and she has almost no cotton.

A further peculiarity of Japan's economic condition is that she purchases her suplies of these vitally essential commodities from a very few nations and by far the principal sellers are Great Britain and ourselves. During the 18 months prior to June, 1936, she purchased 75 per cent of her oil from us and one-half of her importations of iron ore and scrap iron also came from us. During the same period over 80 per cent of her imports of raw cotton came from the United States and British India and the principal supplies of her rubber came from the British Straits Settlements.

Again in Japan's present tottering financial condition she is able to make these purchases of raw material for her guns and ammunition only by selling enough of her own products to obtain the requisite foreign exchange to pay for her purchases.

U. S. Buys 85 Per Cent Of Japan's Raw Silk.

One of these principal Japanese exports is raw silk. This is one of the most generally distributed crops of the Japanese Empire, the production of raw silk taking place in virtually every peasant home and farm. Of that crop the United States in 1935 purchased 85 per cent and in the first six months of 1936, 81 per cent; with Great Britain taking nearly all the rest. With the foreign exchange thus obtained Japan is purchasing from us, as I have said above, the raw materials for her guns.

It is not necessary to go further into the picture. Today hundreds of thousands of brave Chinese are fighting a desperate and hopeless battle. The press reports teem with evidences of their desperate valor and heroic self-sacrifice. But modern war is a master of machinery and munitions. These brave men are virtually armed only with the rifles and machine guns which they carry. Even their supply of cartridges for these weapons is pitifully inadequate. Their artillery is woefully insufficient; their planes merely a fraction in number of the planes of their opponents, and they have no tanks.

Day after day there are being rained upon them bombs from an unobstructed hostile air force and shells from an overwhelming mass of artillery, while their lines are being pierced at intervals by tanks which they have no means of stopping. Yet they have made a resistance so far which has won the admiration of the world. The odds against which they are fighting are being made possible by us!

So I say that the first glaring fact which stares us in the face in our analysis of the situation is that China's principal need is not that something should be done by outside nations to help her, but that outside nations should cease helping her enemy. Given a situation in which the supply of munitions was only somewhat less unequal, China's bravery has already shown that Japan's task would be hopeless.

In the light of these facts, the first question that I should ask of the American and British people is: Does the safety of the American Nation and the safety of the British require that we go on helping Japan to exterminate, by the methods she is daily employing, the gallant Chinese soldiers with whom she is confronted—not to speak of the civilian Chinese population that she is engaged in terrorizing? Is the condition of our statesmanship so pitifully inadequate that we cannot devise the simple means of international co-operation which would stop our participation in this slaughter? I for one do not think so. I believe it can be done, and done effectively, without serious danger to us.

Peace Has Been Put Above Righteousness.

The second great fact which the present situation brings out is the deep-seated error which has pervaded recent American thinking on international matters. I have heard Theodore Roosevelt say that he put peace above everything except righteousness. Where the two came into conflict he supported righteousness. In our recent efforts to avoid war we have reversed this principle and are trying to put peace above righteousness. We have thereby gone far toward killing the influence of our country in the progress of the world. At the same time, instead of protecting, we have endangered our own peace.

Our recent neutrality legislation attempts to impose a dead level of neutral conduct on the part of our Government between right and wrong, between an aggressor and its victim, between a breaker of the law of nations and the nations who are endeavoring to uphold the law. It won't work. Such a policy of a moral drift of such a safe and powerful nation as our own will only set back the hands of progress. It will not save us from entanglement. It will even make entanglement more certain. History has already amply shown this last fact.

As if to teach us the folly of our ways, since this legislation was adopted, fate has paraded before our shocked consciences two instances of glaring aggression in Ethiopia and the Far East. Progress is not made in the world by attempting to exclude a consideration of the difference between right and wrong, nor is it wise legislation to attempt to impose upon the President, to whom the Constitution gives the duty of the conduct of our international affairs, shackles of restraint to hold him helpless in all future conditions no matter how complex or unanticipated.

Finally, in this grave crisis in the Far East we not only must not fear to face issues of right and wrong but we must not fear to co-operate with other nations who are similarly attempting to face those issues. The League of Nations was founded upon a covenant which almost for the first time in human history attempted to base our international civilization upon a reign of law and to make a distinction between a lawbreaker and its victim. Five years ago, on Japan's first aggression into Manchuria, the league, while failing to stop the aggression, did not hesitate to pass judgment upon it in unmistakable language after a full investigation of its facts.

U. S. Gave Support To League in 1933.

The League did not fail to distinguish between right and wrong in the Far East then, and the American Government on February 25, 1933, did not hesitate to range itself alongside of the League in that judgment and to declare that its understanding of the facts was in accord with the findings of fact arrived at by the League and that its conclusions were in accord with the conclusions of the League.

Today on China's appeal the League is again engaged in an examination of the present crisis and the formulation of its judgment thereon. Our Government should not hesitate, if the facts are as we believe them, to support the League again by a statement of its concurrence. Such a judgment is not futile. In the process of time law is built up both within and without national boundaries by such decisions and such precedents. Japan is far more friendless today before the tribunal of world opinion than she would have been except for the investigation and judgment which was rendered against her five years ago. We should not fail to take our part in laying such foundations of the structure of international law of the future.

Since the writing of the foregoing letter has come the President's Chicago speech. I am filled with hope that this act of leadership on his part will result in a new birthday of American courage in facing and carrying through our responsibilities in this crisis.

HENRY L. STIMSON.

Text of State Department Announcement

The statement of the State Department concurring in the conclusions of the League of Nations with regard to the Sino-Japanese situation follows:

The Department of State has been informed by the American Minister to Switzerland of the text of the report adopted by the Advisory Committee of the League of Nations setting forth the advisory committee's examination of the facts of the present situation in China and the treaty obligations of Japan. The Minister has further informed the Department that this report was adopted and approved by the Assembly of the League of Nations today, October 6.

Since the beginning of the present controversy in the Far East, the Government of the United States has urged upon both the Chinese and the Japanese Governments that they refrain from hostilities, and has offered to be of assistance in an effort to find some means, acceptable to both parties to the conflict, of composing by pacific methods the situation in the Far East.

The Secretary of State in statements made public on July 16 and August 23, made clear the position of the Government of the United States in regard to international problems and international relationships throughout the world and as applied specifically to the hostilities which are at present unfortunately going on between China and Japan. Among the principles which in the opinion of the Government of the United States should govern international relationships, if peace is to be maintained, are abstinence by all nations from the use of force in the pursuit of policy and from the interference in the internal affairs of other nations; adjustment of problems in international relations by process of peaceful negotiation and agreement; respect by all nations for the rights of others and observance by all nations of established obligations; and the upholding of the principle of the sanctity of treaties.

On October 5 at Chicago the President elaborated these principles, emphasizing their importance, and in a discussion of the world situation pointed out that there can be no stability or peace either within nations or between nations except under laws and moral standards adhered to by all; that international anarchy destroys every foundation for peace; that it jeopardizes either the immediate or the future security of every nation, large or small; and that it is therefore of vital interest and concern to the people of the United States that respect for treaties, and international morality be restored.

In the light of the unfolding developments in the Far East the Government of the United States has been forced to the conclusion that the action of Japan in China is inconsistent with the principles which should govern the relationships between nations and is contrary to the provisions of the Nine Power Treaty of February 6, 1922, regarding principles and policies to be followed in matters concerning China, and to those of the Kellogg-Briand Pact of August 27, 1928. Thus the conclusions of this Government with respect to the foregoing are in general accord with those of the Assembly of the League of Nations.

The Conference Method.

All who have followed the inquiry of the Minimum Wage Board's retail trade conference must have been impressed by its conscientious procedure. It is hearing both the employers' and the employes' viewpoints in great detail. The minimum wage to be fixed when all the evidence is in will at least be based on accurate information as to costs of living in Washington.

There is also something which is of the essence of democracy in the careful investigation now under way. Some employers are probably learning for the first time about the daily problems of the girls who sell merchandise behind their counters. Too often wages in this field have been reduced to the lowest figure for which help could be secured, without any consideration of the human equation. If the conference should accomplish nothing else, the light it has shed upon the problems of employes in the lower brackets would be of real sociological importance.

Attention has also been directed to the interest of the merchant in the appearance of his clerks. That, of course, is a subtle appeal to selfish interests. Nevertheless, it is an important factor in fixing the lowest wage that should be paid to saleswomen. Fair and adequate wages are coming more and more to be regarded as an investment from which the employer may expect dividends.

Employes, in their turn, should learn a good deal from the conference. The discussion may well raise questions in their minds as to whether $21.36 worth of silk stockings per year is as important as some other items in their personal budgets. Close listeners will pick up a good many helpful suggestions as to how meager salaries can be made to yield a larger degree of comfort by a pruning of luxuries and nonessentials.

Altogether this picture of employer and employe spokesmen, marshaling facts, arguments and exhibits as the basis on which minimum wages should be fixed, strengthens hope for a new era in the adjustment of labor problems. The use of mannequins dressed in $29.75 coats and 69-cent hose suggests the sincerity of the groups now trying to arrive at a minimum wage which employers can pay, and on which employes can keep their self-respect.

It is doubtful if any other capital can show such a democratic and reasonable effort to solve the problem of a minimum wage. And there is good reason to believe that so rational a procedure will result in a rational solution of the problem posed.

Detroit's Primaries.

As final votes in Detroit's nonpartisan municipal primary were being counted last night, it was evident that the C. I. O. had not taken the city by storm in its first direct test of political strength. Sixty-nine-year-old Patrick H. O'Brien and his C. I. O. followers claimed a "substantial victory" over the American Federation of Labor. But Mr. O'Brien faces an extremely difficult contest with Richard W. Reading, city clerk, who came out far ahead in Tuesday's balloting.

It is taken for granted that virtually all of the votes for former Congressman McLeod will be shifted to Mr. Reading in the run-off election on November 2. The outcome is likely to be determined, however, by the division of the votes cast for John W. Smith, former mayor, who had the support of the A. F. of L. Should all of these votes go to Mr. O'Brien he would doubtless be elected. But there are several factors which indicate that Mr. Reading may also draw some of Mr. Smith's support.

In the first place, Mr. Smith was not primarily a labor candidate. He entered the race as an independent. Since he has held a prominent place in the municipal life of Detroit, his vote doubtless came from his personal following as well as from the A. F. of L. When the final votes are cast, moreover, the antagonism between the two labor organizations may be a significant factor. A direct fight between C. I. O. and A. F. of L. candidates for the city council is in prospect. To what extent that contest will carry over into the mayoralty campaign to the benefit of Mr. Reading remains to be seen.

The A. F. of L. can scarcely be expected to be enthusiastic over a C. I. O. candidate who speaks of labor "seizing the reins of government in Detroit and every other American city." With a bitter struggle between the two labor organizations already in progress, an administration under domination of the C. I. O may appear less attractive to the old-line unions than an independent regime under a city official of proved capacity.

The Turn Of The Tide.

Since the collapse of the attempt to stop the Italian invasion of Ethiopia by application of economic sanctions the League of Nations has been almost moribund as an effective organ in behalf of peace. Its machinery was not even invoked in the early attempts to settle the Spanish civil war. It had until Tuesday given no promise of being much more effective in the undeclared war which Japan is waging against China.

But on Tuesday, immediately after the text of President Roosevelt's Chicago speech was cabled across, the League became electric with new vitality. Yesterday's Assembly resolution, condemning Japan for violation of the Boxer Protocol, the Nine-Power Treaty and the Pact of Paris, is not merely by far the strongest international moral judgment to emanate from Geneva in the past two years. It also recommends that League members "should refrain from taking any action which might have the effect of weakening China's power of resistance." And it urges them to "consider how far they can individually extend aid to China."

This is not mere idle talk. These are concrete suggestions to governments, coming with all the moral authority of the concert of nations in congress assembled. And the significance of the resolution adopted unanimously at Geneva yesterday is that it puts neutrality out of the picture so far as the Sino-Japanese conflict is concerned. League members are officially requested to help the victim of Japan's aggression, and thereby nullify the effects of that aggression.

For this constructive outcome, at which all real friends of peace will rejoice, President Roosevelt is responsible. The practical parts of the Assembly resolution, calling for something more than platitudinous sympathy for China, were inserted after receipt of his Chicago speech. They constitute an immediate proof of the timeliness of the President's plea for co-operative action against aggression. They demonstrate how ready the civilized world is to respond to the lead which Mr. Roosevelt gave.

And America, though not a member of the League, is certainly not being laggard in making the "concerted effort" with other peace-loving powers which the President at Chicago properly described as essential to our own national safety. Already the Government has associated itself with the steps taken at Geneva. In the words of the Secretary of State "the action of Japan in China" is a violation of multilateral treaties to uphold which we have pledged our honor and "is inconsistent with the principles which should govern the relationships between nations."

Thus, within twenty-four hours of their delivery, the strong words which President Roosevelt sent ringing around the world are translated into even stronger acts. Our own false conception of neutrality has now gone with the wind of Japan's arrogant and ruthless aggression. And the warlords of Tokyo, for all their seeming strength, must today tremble at the weight of the indictment which their mechanized banditry has finally incurred.

The issue is posed and the decisive step is taken. Its consequences none can foresee. There is no reason to suppose that anything more than quiet pressure, collectively and continuously exerted, will be necessary to turn the tide in the Far East, provided the Chinese armies are able to continue their gallant resistance. But if the crisis should in time call for more positive action, some practical application of the "quarantine" which the President recommends, there will be almost universal approval for such a step. The people of America fully realize that unless "the epidemic of world lawlessness" is stopped soon, immunity for us will become impossible.

There are trying and dangerous months ahead. Japan will not willingly abandon the conquest in which she is now so deeply involved. Every effort will be made there to keep her people from realizing that there is no antagonism, but indeed deep sympathy for them, in the concerted effort to make their government respect its solemn obligations. It will take time, thought and perhaps even a measure of public self-sacrifice throughout the world to reverse a trend which for six years now has been steadily gathering destructive force.

But the trend can, and must, be reversed. In realizing this, and in acting on his realization, President Roosevelt has enormously strengthened his reputation as one of the great leaders of mankind. Under his guidance America has taken the action which its ideals, its responsibilities and its best interests all demand. If other democratic nations, grouped in the reanimated League, perform as vigorously, the mounting tides of lawless terrorism will, at long last, begin to recede.

A Reassuring Statement.

Addressing delegates to the A. F. of L. convention, Chairman Madden of the National Labor Relations Board emphatically denied charges that the board had favored the C. I. O. unions.

Its task has been made much more difficult, as he says, by the schism in the ranks of organized labor, but its duty under the law is plain. That is to protect the workers from coercion in any form or from any source. The fact that many employers favor the A. F. of L., believing it to be a more conservative and better disciplined organization than its rival, the C. I. O., does not justify them in coercing workers to join an A. F. of L. union any more than a company union.

Mr. Madden stressed the danger, from the workers' standpoint, of trying to secure employer support for a union as a means of vanquishing a rival organization. If the law were changed to permit employers to be represented by a union of their own choosing, he warns that America would "become again the happy hunting ground for the company union." Far-seeing labor leaders, alive to the importance of building up a strong, independent organization for collective bargaining, cannot fail to appreciate the force of this reasoning.

Mr. Madden also takes a thoroughly sound stand on the subject of labor contracts. He asserts that the board has not in the past nor will it in the future upset contracts of a valid nature prior to the date of expiration. This is needed assurance because in one of its official pronouncements the board made certain statements that might be interpreted to conflict with Mr. Madden's views.

If employes could change their representatives and demand a new contract at any time in disregard of existing agreements, employers would have little incentive to enter into formal contracts with the unions. Such a situation would be a standing invitation to labor agitators to capture votes for rival organizations, thus depriving both employers and employes of the benefits of industrial peace for the duration of a bargaining agreement.

A union with a reputation for living up to its agreements by holding its members in line and sternly suppressing disturbances is in a much better position to drive a good bargain than one whose control is in doubt. A strong organization of this type would be extremely difficult to establish if the National Labor Relations Board could be prevailed upon to hold new elections, certify new bargaining representatives and invalidate old contracts whenever 51 per cent of the voters favored a change. Under such circumstances wages and hours contracts negotiated through collective bargaining would have a very doubtful value since there would be no assurance that they would hold for the duration of the agreement.

Zoning For The Community.

It is natural that there should always be vigorous protests against proposals to rezone for commercial use a piece of property adjacent to expensive residences. The present contest over the Walsh residence at 2020 Massachusetts avenue is, in this respect, merely a revival of an intermittent controversy. Hence the Zoning Commission's decision is likely to involve much more than the fate of one elaborate but obsolete dwelling.

So far as this single piece of property is concerned, it may be possible to present a very convincing argument for a zoning change. The existing structure may be a liability, and redevelopment of the land for apartment or hotel use, as permitted under the present zoning, may not seem warranted. It must be remembered, however, that the chief purpose of municipal zoning is not the convenience of individuals but the protection of entire neighborhoods against undesirable or inappropriate encroachments.

Denial of the petition might work a hardship in this particular case. But to grant it would seem to threaten no less of a hardship on many other residents of that section. The opposition of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association suggests the extent of civic concern over a proposal that might entirely change the character of this section of Massachusetts avenue.

Obviously, then, it is the section and not the individual property which should be uppermost in the minds of the commission members when they make their decision. "Spot" zoning is really not zoning at all. It usually means only a breaking down of the protective restrictions which modern cities have built up for their property owners.

Allowance must be made, of course, for growth and change. But commercial encroachments of the type requested should be permitted only if the commission should decide, using the utmost care, that the neighborhood in question might better be devoted to business use.

Street railway service in many cities is being discontinued. This is published for the information of many who are still waiting on corners for streetcars.

The People Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

President Roosevelt, with characteristic gayety, informs a Western throng that balancing the budget is "pretty important" and assures them, as he annually assures everybody, that this will be accomplished "next year." The Chief Executive then smilingly related his favorite story concerning that very rich fellow, who resents being taxed. The crowd, of course, roared its approval. It enjoys nothing more than to be told the rich are being "soaked." What Mr. Roosevelt failed to tell them was that the masses, not the millionaires, were actually bearing the great brunt of an ever-increasing tax burden.

How much longer can political soothing sirup keep gullible groups from the stern realization that taxes are indeed paid by the workers' brow-sweat, as Mr. Roosevelt himself pointed out prior to his election? How much longer can the man on the street be doped into believing that a debt approaching 40 billion is really nothing to worry about? Hasn't the time arrived for our political leaders to substitute frankness, honesty and sincerity with the voters in place of hypocrisy and deceit?

When all is said, if the problem of poverty could be solved by repeated raids on the Treasury, with no thought of future consequences, the specter of want would have long since been banished from the world. An ever-increasing deficit, far from destroying destitution, actually breeds disaster, as history has proven. E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Socialization Of Banks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. W. Gaston Bulloch, in a letter to The Post, says he wants a sales tax for the District of Columbia. For most people that is merely a tax on the necessities of life which they are already unable to secure enough income to purchase. The result of a sales tax would hurt business just that much.

The middle class is doomed to extinction if capitalism continues to exist, regardless of what taxes are levied. Mr. Bulloch should study up on causes instead of trying to deal with effects. The taxes of the economic state (banks and industries), upon the average citizen, are far greater in amount than taxes levied by the political state. The taxes of the economic state consist of interest and profits. All consumers are hit by this tax, whether they be property owners or not.

Mr. Bulloch argues that the rich can dodge their taxes by investing in tax-exempt securities, but such securities are only a fraction of the total amount in the control of the rich who prefer to make big profits in banking and industrial securities at the expense of the many. Tax-exempt securities bring in very small dividends, comparatively, and there is no "gravy" to be had in the nature of financing, refinancing and commission charges. The wealthy secure most of their incomes by exploitation of underpaid labor and by autocratic ownership and control of the banking system.

The solution is socialization of the national banking system. That would result in elimination of interest for the national Government, a huge saving annually. It would be the quickest way to attain a balanced budget without burdening the people. A. W. HART.

Seeking Justice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Is there no one in Washington high up in power with a sense of justice? A professor here, in the University of Illinois, said ever since the World War there have been more and more restrictions on private industry and less and less on Government spending. But private industry must pay the cost of Government spending when Government jobs are not self-supporting. How to do it and pay good wages?

"While the nations rage so furiously and the people imagine a vain thing," that they can buy salvation by going to church and giving to church some 10 per cent of their income or more, what can we do about it? Prophets were stoned, Jesus crucified, for getting back to essentials in religion, justice, honesty, etc. It gets to be the worship of the Golden Calf when giving to church is overemphasized.

We have child marriages in this country the same as in India. Soldiers, trained to kill, did that to babies two years old and younger at the time Jesus was born. Should we let our military systems, by instilling fear, rule the world? We have had false prophets who have set up false standards, false ideals, idols, false gods. The purpose of all religion is to teach the ten simple rules for human conduct that by practicing daily no nation would need a dictator or tyrant, except perhaps a few that have no desire to be fair in their dealings.

Socialism or communism is offered as a cure-all for the world's injustice, even in some of the church literature. We have too much of that already. The straight and narrow way means, avoid extremes. Don't be a big hog and do not permit others to be big hogs.

Electoral Procedure.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Presidential nominating and elective powers are now separate, and by uniting them in the hands of a single group the New Deal Party can be defeated in 1940.

Millions of individual votes are nullified by the general-ticket mode of selecting Presidential electors because it gives all the electoral votes of a State to the party having a plurality. The same submerged people voting in districts elect Congressmen through whom they should make their strength count by transforming each of them into an actual Presidential elector in the House of Representatives.

There are two ways to win a Presidential election. The first is to secure 266 electorial votes. The second is to get 25 State votes, if the college fails to elect. Sixty-two Representatives from the 25 smallest States can elect a President against the combined vote of the remaining 373 members who represent 23 States.

By States the Republicans have 7 votes and are tied in two States, the Democrats 37 votes and the Independents 2 votes. To win, the Republicans need 18 State votes. A coalition with the conservative Democrats would add 11 votes to their strength. It is easier starting with 7 State votes to get 25 out of 48 than to begin with 8 electoral votes and secure 266 out of 531.

No person is constitutionally the President of the United States until after the electorial votes have been counted by both Houses of Congress in joint session. The counting of the electoral votes is the weak spot in the Constitution.

Because the Electoral College has really been out of order for more than a century it is possible by a skillful use of sections 4 to 6 of the act of February 3, 1887, to challenge and nullify the entire 531 electoral votes, resulting in no election.

The House of Representatives is then required immediately to elect a President from the three candidates having the highest number of votes on the list. A candidate can be recognized by the House only through a Presidential elector; and since no one has any votes, the nomination by the convention is dead. The only group having any constitutional power to act is the House of Representatives, in whose hands the powers of nomination and election are united. If the minority party has been careful to secure the necessary 25 States and has learned the secret of causing the Electoral College to collapse, Mr. Roosevelt or his successor will be wiped out.

An anti-New Deal President, using his veto power and supported by a trifle more than one-third of the members of either House of Congress could practically dictate his policies to the New Deal legislators. IVO de CAPET.

The Windsors Visit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

What will the United States do with the Windsors when they arrive? That is no idle question. Like Noah's dove, former King Edward has found no spot on earth on which to rest his foot, and with his oft-wed wife now turns his face toward the United States.

Courtesy is due this couple, but certainly no foolish fawning and undue enthusiasm. Here is an opportunity which one suggests with fear and trembling that it will not be utilized as it should be. Without offending the better element in England, our people can do with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor not quite what we did with the rector who rushed to our shores to "lecture" to us on why he married the couple; but we can at least be sane in our courtesy to this man who had the highest office of a civil sort in his hand and the greatest chance any man now living had to assist the world in its present chaotic condition, but who threw it up for "the woman he loved" to spend his time on golf fields, night clubs and seaside pleasure resorts.

His country is now in need of every drop of blood of patriotic Englishmen, and has in reality its back to the wall with its Jewish-Arab situation in Palestine, and its sensitive problem of the Mediterranean in dealing with Spain and Mussolini. It is difficult to see how a man of Duke Edward's background and training can content himself to play with life while his nation is so hard pressed for any and every help it can obtain to assist in guiding the world through this epoch.

To see a man spending huge sums of the money of the people in amusing himself and his duchess does not call for any red-blooded American's sympathy just now. Pray let our people while considerate, also remember that by our much ado over these prospective visitors we may show very poor taste.

Fascist Aggression.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir:

Where did the Japanese get the idea of the indiscriminate slaughter of women and innocent little children, by shellings and bombings?

Why, from our Christian warfare now going on in Spain.

If we cannot get up enough indignation to summon the moral forces of the world to stop the mass murder of women and children in Spain we should not endeavor to find compensation by venting our spleen against Japan, our imitator, as horrible as her practices are. Of all the abominations of earth the mass killings of women and children is the worst, and all Christian forces (including the church) should combine to put an end to them in Spain, as the beginning, and immediately. Then we can properly turn to Japan. H. C. M.

Washington, Sept. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am pleased to read the authoritative words of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler showing a difference in dictators apparent to many of us for some time. The hard-headed Stalin, ridding himself of Trotzky and Trotzkyism, is doing his dictating at home for development of Russia's resources in a way, now that she is rid of the incubus of lardlordism, that may in time make our own look like 30 cents; while the little dictators of the totalitarian states and their frenzied militarist allies in Japan, to whom Russia is a pain in the neck because of her success in lightening the burdens of her people, are huffing and puffing and slavering their mightiest to blow down the house of democracy in Spain and China and elsewhere. Italian Fascists do well to call themselves "sons of the wolf." I couldn't think of a better name for them. DEMOS.

Queen Of The Seas.

UNTIL a few weeks ago I never fully appreciated the extent of man's sense of possession.

I was crossing over to Jersey on the Hoboken ferry, for no particular reason except that I had several hours on my hands and a sudden urge to "go to sea" had gripped me. I was standing under the bridge, feeling very much like a voyageur, and watching excitedly the river traffic, the double border of piers, and the New York skyline. A couple of men who were beside me began talking about something and pointing ahead.

"Yeh, dere she is . . . see? I tol' ya day ain't moved her yet . . . see?"

"Yeh, so she is . . . I see."

I began looking—and I didn't have to look very hard. Warped into one of the Hoboken docks, blotting out all the waterfront beyond it, was the towering bulk of a three-funneled liner. I knew there were only a few vessels in the world of like dimensions, and as this one had the red, white, and blue painted on her stacks, I at once realized who she was—the proud old Leviathan.

The ferry—the Tonawanda, I believe its name was—docked in a pier adjacent to the liner, and by this time the impulse to investigate the former Queen of the Seas was irresistible. I had studied her as we were coming in, and the thing that had struck me most forcibly was the fact that she was still a beautiful ship. This came as a surprise, because she has often been referred to as a "great old tub," or a "bloated barge." True, her white paint was mottled with brown splotches from the weather and the soot of the river, and her black hull showed rust here and there; nevertheless, I was impressed by the length of her lines and a certain majestic beauty in her massive superstructure.

I was soon inside the government wharf which berthed her, and stumbling about crates and barrels in quest of the gangplank. Presently I located it and started across, just as if I were about to embark for Europe, save for the uncanny quiet that hung all about me. I stepped onto a doormat, and suddenly the silence was shattered by a clanging of bells and the hum of buzzers. I had set off the burglar system.

From the end of a dim passageway there came a voice, "What do you want?" . . . followed by a head which poked around a stanchion and peered at me.

"May I come aboard?" I asked. Did I have a pass? No, I did not have a pass. I walked back to the speaker. He was sitting in an old rocker, close beside an opened hull-door. He was a little man, a gray man, with surprisingly gentle eyes. He was the "captain." I perceived at once that he had sole authority upon this liner—that it was "his" boat.

He explained that I could not go over the ship, that I must get a pass in New York. It was "all dark" inside because the turbines and the generators were long cold, and it was considered unsafe. He was friendly and willing to talk, so I lingered and asked him questions.

When I mentioned rumors that the Leviathan's "belly" was cracked, he bristled, and I began to see then how dear this old colossus was to him.

"It isn't so at all," he said. "She's perfectly seaworthy. Those are a lot of lies you hear about her. She always was a great ship—and she still is. All she needs is a coat of paint, a little tuning up, and she'll be ready to put to sea. But, I wouldn't want her to leave . . ."

Presently he began to chuckle. "I've come a long way," he said, ". . . a long way since I was a kid. I can remember my first ship—built it myself, out of orange crates, barrel staves, and . . . let's see, what did I put it together with . . . horse shoe nails that I used to swipe from in back of the blacksmith's shop. And, you know, it floated—the damn thing floated. I used to paddle it under the piers, and sometimes I even took it out into the stream . . . toss in the wake of the boats like a cork . . . Wonder it didn't capsize. And, you know, I was just so proud of that boat . . . boy, I thought it was fine. Funny, isn't it, how kids are?" And the lines of his face softened, and he chuckled again.

Yes, I thought, but not as proud as he was of this boat. He told me how he would prowl about the deserted liner, and poke into the staterooms, and the lounges, the dining salons, the bar . . . they were all furnished, too, just as the stewards had left them on the last day of service . . . "you bet they're swell . . . there's beautiful stuff in them . . ." He'd been way into the hold, and seen the engines, the big idle drive shafts, the furnaces, and the dynamos. No, he didn't know what condition they were in—he wasn't an engineer—but they looked nice and he personally did not see why they could not run again. His eyes shone as he spoke of these "innards," and I thought that he would like to be chief engineer as well as captain.

After a time he stiffened a little, and stood up. "Tour duty," he said, and nothing else. I looked at him to see if he were joking—but, no, he was quite serious, and I realized it was time for me to go. The captain was taking over, and "all-ashore" was the cue for visitors. I walked back through the dim passageway, feeling as though I had really been all over the vessel, and as I stepped onto the doormat the bells again clanged and the buzzers again hummed . . . then my foot left it, and the silence returned to hang low over the old Leviathan.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Freshman Ambassador.

JOE DAVIES, our Ambassador to Moscow, has returned to his post after a summer of wandering in 14 other European countries and, while it is no fuzz off my peach what Mr. Davies does with his time, I wonder how the other diplomats of our service have felt about it. Ambassadors and ministers are always very polite outwardly, but if you catch them with their feet up and their hair down, so to speak, they are human just like policemen, reporters and, I might add, pickpockets.

A policeman does not like to find another policeman invading his beat, and a reporter doing the courthouse, for example, is likely to show annoyance if he discovers the man from the hotel run or police headquarters rifling through the divorce petitions in the clerk's office in an otherwise laudable effort to pick up a hot one for the night-and-home edition.

As for pickpockets, the ethics of that profession, like those of a profession which is said to be the oldest of them all, are understood to provide that when one is working a given side of the street the others shall take the other side or, if that side is taken also, take another street.

As I understand the assignments in our diplomatic service, Mr. Norman Davis is a sort of roundsman or sergeant with a roving commission to visit other men's beats to see if their wine and cigars are up to the American standard, and not to report them to the State Department if there are dents in their plug hats.

• • • •

BUT JOE DAVIES is not Norman Davis. Joe Davies, in fact, is just a freshman Ambassador, and yet he has been bouncing all over the place for months, and our other statesmen can hardly be blamed for suspecting that he is trying to show them up. He might even give the State Department an idea that a real hustler could handle half a dozen embassies and legations, and thus throw other deserving Democrats and plodding career men out of work.

The best post nowadays is Mr. Bingham's in London, and certainly Mrs. Davies would look more at home 'mid the pleasures and palaces of Mayfair than among the Four Hundred of Moscow.

Of course, a lady in the diplomatic service must go where her husband's duty calls him, even to 14 countries in one summer and back to Moscow at least long enough to keep the franchise. But somehow Mrs. Davies seems incongruous among the Communists, for she is one of our richest capitalistic American ladies who has always loved nice things. And I am not one to stir up suspicion and trouble among our diplomats, but I do have a feeling that—well, you know, London, His Majesty the King, Her Majesty the Queen, the duke and duchess, and how well you are looking this evening.

What has Moscow to offer? Only Joe Stalin, the head man, who dresses like a French baggage porter and keeps in hiding anyway; some business men and the American journalists.

• • • •

AND, UNHAPPILY, Mrs. Davies and journalists are not on the best of terms, a state of affairs which probably goes back to the mischievous conduct of a young lady journalist who used to cover society when Mrs. Davies was the social leader of Palm Beach.

Mrs. Davies' estate, which had a lovely jardin, which is French for garden, was known as El Mirasol or El Hacienda or something of the kind, but there was also a sign by the entrance to the driveway which read "Slowly, Please." And this lady journalist always pretended to know no better than to refer to the delightful mask ball or society circus at Mrs. Davies' magnificent estate, "El Slowly, Please." Surely, that was no way to win friends for the press.

Strangely, my thoughts in connection with Ambassador Davies and Mrs. Davies always revert to London or, for second choice, Paris. Nobody seems to care much about Moscow, and Mr. Bill Bullitt, who is in Paris now, was on his toes with a long lead off from Moscow before he went down with a hook slide and caught the bag.

I might also compare this situation to the nursery game of musical chairs, and suggest that the other diplomats stick close to their places, for we seem to have one extra Ambassador and lady in Europe these days.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

They're Coming Over.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are coming to the United States, and it seems about time. No couple in history ever wasted so much publicity by staying away from us so long.

• • • •

They are expected around Christmas time, and if the police are smart they will start now getting ready to protect plate-glass store fronts, keep traffic moving and keep the American public under control.

• • • •

When Eddie and Wallie are sighted off Ambrose Light the goings-on around America will at least run the Lindberghs, Bobby Jones and Gertrude Ederle demonstrations a close second.

• • • •

We always felt that the Windsors were a sure bet to visit America. But we had an idea Grover Whalen was saving 'em for the World's Fair.

• • • •

The Duke has no booking agent, however, and plans his own appearances. He made his own announcement of his coming visit to Meatless America and saw that it would get extra headlines by this statement: "The Duke has always interested himself in the well-being of the workingman. He looks forward to the opportunity that future travel may afford of gaining further experience on this subject."

• • • •

You're not hinting, are you, Eddie?

• • • •

All England was so stirred by this crack that he got five times as much advertising as if he had just announced that he was coming to America for fun.

• • • •

The Duke insists that he will devote most of his American visit to studying the problems of housing and working conditions. He will delve into the situation if it takes his last yawn.

• • • •

We can picture Eddie right now leaving those night clubs an hour early to see what's happening to the poor workingman, and urging the motorcycle escort, mounted cops, brass bands, Miss America clubs and decorated floats to stand back and let him get a look at a worker's modest home.

• • • •

Your intentions are all right, Eddie, but you have no more chance of escaping the crowd to study working conditions than Jumbo, the Siamese Twins or Barnum's What-Is-It had.

• • • •

You and the Duchess will get a reception here so noisy you will think it is a retake of Abdication Month.

• • • •

If you stay over long enough you'll be surprised where you will wind up.

• • • •

With your popularity, it wouldn't surprise us if you wound up as the Republican Party's only hope for a candidate to beat Roosevelt.

Thirsting For Peace

Observer Doubts Peaceful Intent Voiced By Mussolini And Hitler And Also Strength Of "Berlin-Rome Axis."

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE CURRENT number of a leading magazine publishes an article on Mussolini's "Sons of the Wolf." In the magazine's back section is a picture of a group of them, pathetic little 6-year-olds, uniformed like soldiers, robbed of their childhood, trained from the cradle to regard war as a noble and glorious occupation. In Germany little boys are told that they "are born to die for Germany."

But in Berlin Mussolini and Hitler renew their assurances that they are thirsting for peace. However, they are not going to permit insults to themselves in foreign countries, and the man in the moon must stop making faces at them. All they demand is, "as sole prerequisite for their friendship, that no attempt be made against the foundations of our glorious 'uropean civilization." They announce further that they are unalterably determined to extend the blessings of that civilizaiion to Spain. And German scientists are experimenting to find some disease germs which, used against an enemy, will not attack their own troops.

Only a few days ago an Italian official declared that no volunteers had left Italy for Spain since the signing of the nonintervention agreement. One recalls the darky who, accused of stealing chickens, indignantly denied the charge, but after his accuser had passed on said to himself, "Ef he'd said ducks he'd had me." If the official had been asked whether "any" Italians, not volunteers, had left for Spain, he would have been in a tight spot. But he might even then have denied it, salving his conscience with the knowledge that at least some of them thought they were going to Ethiopia, although they landed in Spain.

Diplomatic usage prevents the statesmen of free countries from pointing out that no statement, promise or agreement of dictators is of any value or credibility whatever, but that ought not to prevent nondiplomats from saying so. Following the terrible rout of the Italians at Guadalajara, Rome admitted that a few of her nationals had been killed. Other casualty lists made light of losses in Spain. But now Mussolini speaks of the "thousands of Italian volunteers" who have fallen there.

Dictators Have No Sense Of Humor.

DENUNCIATIONS of democracy by both Hitler and Mussolini would fill volumes. Now the world is told that Germany and Italy are "the greatest democracies" in the world. Hitler was put into power by Germany's great capitalists, but we hear capitalism denounced as ruling all non-Fascist countries. Self-critical faculty and a sense of humor disqualify any would-be dictator from reaching his goal.

There is little dependable information about the numbers of Italian "volunteers" or the quantities of munitions of war being sent to Spain. There are comparatively few German combatants, except artilleristc and aviators, but a constant flow of material goes out from Hamburg and other German harbors.

In the last days of August a number of freight cars arrived at Stade, on the Elbe below Hamburg. They were marked "Eggs. Switch carefully." The consignment included a number of carloads of munitions for Spain and 20 for Shanghai. The steamer Maritza took on 88 tons of chemicals for making poison gas, destination unrevealed. The steamer Radbod, home port Emden, is on the way to Japan with a cargo of airplane motors.

The ships of the Woermann Line and of the Oldenburg-Portuguese Steamship Co., which leave Hamburg weekly for Vigo, have begun to use the flags of Panama, Peru and other South American states not represented in the nonintervention agreement. A hospital has been established in Gotha for wounded German soldiers, mainly aviators. The local mustering office in Hirschberg, Silesia, is (or was a month ago) sending personal letters to married men who have done their compulsory military service, ordering them to report at the office. When they report they are urged to enter new volunteer formations for Spain.

When Mr. Eden declared flatly at Geneva last week that the nonintervention agreement regarding Spain had been broken, he knew what he was talking about. When he announced that Britain's armament in the air had created not only a defensive but also "a strong offensive force," Hitler and Mussolini knew what he was talking about.

It was inevitable that the meeting of the two dictators in Berlin should give new impetus to the talk about an alleged "Berlin-Rome axis." It is even rumored that Mussolini is about to give Hitler a freer hand in Austria, and there have recently been happenings which, viewed by themselves, seem to corroborate the rumor. It is hardly likely, for one thing, that prominent German, Hungarian and Italian statesmen merely happened to be in St. Gilgen, near Salzburg, during the recent festival plays in Salzburg.

St. Gilgen Meeting Viewed As Important.

THEY included Baron von Neurath, German foreign minister, several other German diplomats and high officials from the propoganda ministry, Vice Regent Horthy and Premier Daranyi of Hungary, and the Italian minister to Vienna. In view of recent efforts by Germany and Italy to induce Vienna to abandon negotiations which have been going on for some time between Austria and Czechoslovakia, looking to a rapprochement between the two countries, there is reason to believe that the initiative to the St. Gilgen meeting came from Berlin. It is also a fact that Nazi activity in Austria has increased lately.

Nevertheless, despite all these surface indications and apparently obvious interpretations, Mussolini will not and cannot let Hitler swallow up Austria if he can prevent it. There is nothing behind the Berlin-Rome axis, so far as Mussolini is concerned, but talk. It is open to any country to commit suicide if it will, and it is not at all impossible that Nazi Germany may eventually do just that, but Mussolini, for all his fanaticism, is a realist. An alliance with Germany for war would be a dice game in which he would have to say to Hitler, "Heads, you win; tails, I lose."

A dispatch from Berlin declares that "authoritative sources" say that Britain "is to be convinced of the inflexibility of the Rome-Berlin axis and of the military strength that supports it." It will be a considerable job to convince any statesmen who know European history—and geography—that Mussolini will ever fight Great Britain and France with anybody's help.

Nevertheless there is still no lack of things to worry about on the Continent. The disloyal two-thirds of Czechoslovakia's Bohemian (Sudete) Germans, united under their Fuehrer Konrad Henlein, are doing all they can, with Berlin's help, to establish "the foundations of our glorious European civilization" in a state which still refuses to believe that democracy, parliamentary government and the dignity of man are archaic, outmoded doctrines.

In Prague last September spokesmen for this two-thirds described to me their demand for autonomy. When they had finished telling what they wanted it was obvious that no government could possibly grant such demands. To do so would mean the creating of a state within a state; the central government at Prague would have nothing to say to some 15 per cent of the state's total population.

Czechoslovakia's Fate Is Still In Doubt.

PREPARATIONS are now being made by the Henlein malcontents to compel the Czech Parliament to consider their demands this autumn. The demands include the establishing of a demarcation line between the Sudete Germans and the rest of the people; a separate cadastre (ground book) for the Sudetes, with power to assess and lay taxes; self-government, and "indemnity for the wrong done in 1918," that is, for not letting the northwestern, northern and northeastern rim of Czechoslovakia be added to Germany. In other words, the Henlenites demand "reparations" from their own government.

Henlein and his lieutenants are reported to be planning a campaign of agitation during the parliamentary discussion of their demands, with the hope of bringing about a crisis which will move Berlin to diplomatic intervention.

The obvious unwillingness of Great Britain and France to take action against Nazi and Fascist intervention in Spain or against Japan's murderous assault on China—an unwillingness due, of course, to fear that any energetic move would precipitate the war which both countries not possessing "our glorious European civilization" so anxiously desire to avoid—encourages Henlein and his supporters in Berlin.

The newspaper "Vonkov," organ of the Czech Agrarians, reported a month ago alleged negotiations between Prague and Berlin looking to concessions on Czechoslovakia's part. The report was officially denied, and the denial is credible, but Czechoslovakia's existence is continuously menaced by her great neighbor.

Here is the chief danger spot on the continent.

Call To Action

By Barnet Nover

President Roosevelt's Great Speech.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S Chicago speech is being hailed as marking a revolutionary departure in American foreign policy. But actually it is revolutionary only in its desperate candor. It is not revolutionary in the least with respect either to purpose or program.

The views which President Roosevelt so fervently holds with respect to the impossibility of isolation and the unavoidable necessity of co-operating with other peace-loving nations if world peace is to be maintained, have been, in greater or lesser measure, the views of every President who has held office during the past 20 years.

They were the views of Wilson, of course. But they were also the views of Harding, of Coolidge, of Hoover, although Roosevelt's predecessors with the exception of the war President, found it politically inexpedient or undesirable to come out as boldly and as flat-footedly as he has done.

• • • •

HARDING came into office on what was interpreted as a wave of isolationist sentiment. But the very circumstance that he felt compelled to summon the Washington conference to consider the problem of naval armaments and the troubled situation in the Far East is proof that, in practice at any rate, he was no believer in isolation.

Coolidge was not a little vinegary in his refusal to commit the United States to any degree of participation in the activities of the League of Nations. But it was during his term that the United States invited all the other nations to accept a pact outlawing war as an instrument of policy.

The enthusiasm with which that pact was accepted by more than 60 nations was the result not of any mystical belief in the virtue of pious incantations but in the realistic hope that the pact indicated a readiness on the part of the United States to throw in its great weight on the side of peace.

And during the Hoover Administration the United States was impelled by the force of circumstances to undertake a very large degree of co-operation with other powers with respect to financial and political affairs. Secretary Stimson's handling of the Far Eastern crisis and the Hoover moratorium were the high-water marks of such efforts.

• • • •

BUT FROM the time of the Senate's rejection of the Versailles Treaty and the Covenant of the League of Nations to this week American Presidents have never been wholly candid with the American people.

No isolationists, they have consistently felt it necessary to throw a sop to isolationist sentiment. They feared to arouse the sleeping dragon of 1919. They had to talk as though the United States could live apart from the rest of the world. To the discerning their actions gave them away. But the circumstance that co-operative efforts by the United States with the other nations had to be undertaken by indirection did nothing to educate American public opinion in the grim realities of the world situation.

No doubt President Roosevelt's predecessors felt that by slow stages the United States could extend the scope of its co-operative efforts for world peace and world order.

During the early postwar years the world situation appeared neither so desperate nor so pressing as to demand large-scale action for which American public opinion was not prepared. But it has now become impossible to pretend, any longer, in an isolation which does not and cannot exist.

• • • •

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT himself during the first years of his Administration succumbed to the fears which had paralyzed his predecessors whenever they considered taking any determined stand on world affairs.

The Chicago speech was not his first important statement on foreign policy. There have been others before it and in many of them, to those who can read between the lines, there is clearly to be found precisely the same ideas he expounded with such force and eloquence on Tuesday. But hitherto he has found it necessary to talk in parables; to make his points by hints; to generalize rather than particularize. That is why their force was largely lost and the American people continued to have a childish faith in the fetish of misnamed neutrality.

Such tactics are no longer adequate. At a time when the fires of war are raging all about us, when one after another of the standards which have governed the affairs of nations in their dealings with one another are being struck down by evil hands, we too are menaced. For as President Roosevelt so aptly says; "War is a contagion, whether it be declared or undeclared. It can engulf states and peoples remote from the original scene of hostilities." And its evil consequences are certain to be far-reaching in time as well as in space.

Even if, somehow, the United States could manage to keep aloof from another struggle the breakdown of the world's economic life and political and moral stability would wreak profound injury upon us. This all President's since World War days have known.

President Roosevelt has now undertaken to make that circumstance clear to the American people by revealing to them the terrible realities of the situation and by proposing, without evasion, a program of co-operative action.

• • • •

WHAT IS TO be done? Those who seek a detailed chart of action will not find it in the President's speech. But the details of how the United States can co-operate with other nations in preserving peace are, at the moment, much less important than the readiness of this Nation to undertake such co-operation.

Even negatively, the weight thrown by the United States, the greatest and most powerful Nation on earth, can be enormously effective. If we go no further than to inform would-be aggressors in language they cannot misunderstand, that we shall do nothing to aid them in their aggressions, that we shall under no circumstances interfere with any program of sanctions other nations may carry out against peace-breaking states, that in itself would be a highly important step forward.

But clearly the United States could hardly be content with a purely negative policy. There are positive actions we can take, say with respect to the Far Eastern situation, which without involving us in war, would certainly strengthen the forces of world law and order.

In this connection the suggestion made by former Secretary Henry L. Stimson in a communication printed elsewhere in The Post is very much in order. By putting economic pressure on Japan, the United States, working hand-in-hand with Great Britain and other nations, could stop the island empire in its tracks and in a relatively short time. And the force of that co-operative action would be felt not only in the Far East but everywhere else in the world as well.

The way to peace is relatively easy to follow if the will is there.

John Drinkwater

By William Lyon Phelps

Posthumous Book.

John Drinkwater, who wrote two very successful plays, exactly two more than most dramatists write, had completed just before his recent death a manuscript which his wife has seen through the press. The book is in the form of a novel; it is called "Robinson of England" and is published by the Macmillan Co., New York.

• • • •

I read every word of this narrative with unalloyed delight. It is full of charm. The leading four characters are a bachelor uncle who "at long last" is about to be married; one nephew and two nieces. We see the countryside of England through their eyes.

This book is not "British propaganda," yet everyone who has been in England will love England more because of it. And I think what Mr. Drinkwater meant by its composition was to show people of all nations the right and true way to love their country.

• • • •

It shows too the value of good traditions; our close association with the past; the eloquence of ancestry; the beauty of old things, where age does not mean degeneration, but an increase in beauty and dignity and value and honor.

No description can do justice to this book or give a true account of it. I have never read anything like it. I think everyone who reads it will enjoy it and will become better and happier.

Tom McCarthy

Annapolis Guide Books Ignore Marcellus Hall

THERE'S ONE institution at Annapolis you won't find mentioned in the guide books. Dusty files hold a quota of Annapolis tradition, but they have strong competition with the information to be found in Marcellus Hall.

It might be well to explain at this point that Marcellus Hall, while very much of an institution, is by no means a building. Marcellus Hall is indubitably a compound of flesh and blood, wide grins, rich laughter and far-reaching memory.

TOM McCARTHY.

For better than a quarter of a century this genial colored man has been a bell hop at Carvel Hall, the ancient tree-shaded hotel, which looks out on Prince George street.

There Marcellus has followed his humble calling with such devotion that he has been incorporated in the Annapolis tradition, prevailed upon to write guide books and even to act for the movies.

• • • •

MARCELLUS CAN tell you just what "Mistuh Dick Powell" said to him in "Shipmates Forever," and what he said to "Mistuh Dick," and he takes equal pride in his second adventure in celluloid in "Annapolis Salute." However, Hollywood comes off second best with Marcellus when he begins to talk about "his boys."

"His boys" include most of the midshipmen, who have been through the Academy in the last 25 years, but his special devotion is reserved for such gridiron immortals as "Mistuh Babe Brown" and "Mistuh Buzz Borries."

Sometimes, however, his devotion puts him in what he calls a "mighty unfortunate predicament." One such incident revolves around the person of an All-American football player of a half a dozen years ago. Marcellus didn't want his name printed because he is now a most-respected officer in the United States Navy.

"It was pretty late at night," Marcellus explained, "and ah was on my way home. Ah heard somebody saying in sort of a whisper, 'Hey Marcellus.'

"When ah turned around there was that young gentleman I told you about, and he wanted me to help him over the wall.

"Ah told him," Marcellus said with pious pride, "that he was being mighty foolish in 'Frenching out' just a few weeks before graduation, but ah helped him back over the wall. He was one of 'my boys,' and the damage had been done already.

"Well, ah helped him over the wall, and he landed in the arms of the guards. You can imagine how ah felt. It weighed on my mind something awful, for it looked as though he was goin' to lose his commission.

"Ah told his father that ah felt sort of guilty about it happening, but his father said, 'Don't you worry, Marcellus, boys will be boys.'

"It turned out all right though. June week came along, and at the last minute they decided to give US our commission, graduate US. That was the closest WE ever came to not graduating!"

Marcellus feels as bad about mishaps to "his boys," as though they had happened to himself. So when they get straightened out, Marcellus is likely to say, "WE sure had a close call that time."

• • • •

MIDSHIPMEN and their "drags" were passing through the hotel lobby, and Marcellus' conversation was constantly interrupted to acknowledge the greeting of the young men in blue and the brightly clad girls, headed for the football game.

"Mah soul, times have changed," he said, after taking a moment off to reassure a bright young thing that the checking of her baggage would receive his personal attention. "Ah remember when the young ladies all used to wear 'hobble skirts,' and when a midshipman would be afraid to bring his "drag" to the dance if she wore make-up.

"What powerful changes 25 years make," he said reflectively. Sitting here watching the classes come and go, watching the young ladies come down here year after year as "drags," you get to know them. You get to wondering about them.

"Ah'm not saying that there's been such a change in the Academy boys. Year in and year out they're pretty much the same, except now they seem a little younger, but the young ladies!" Marcellus threw up his hands in a gesture of bewilderment.

"Ah'm not saying that the change hasn't been for the better. These young ladies—" Marcellus broke off to acknowledge the greeting of one of the young ladies in question.

"These young ladies," he said, "are easier to wait on. They've traveled more than the young ladies of 25 years ago. Why back in those days they used to faint!

"Can you imagine these young ladies fainting?" he asked me.

• • • •

I TOLD HIM that I couldn't imagine such a thing.

"No sir, these young ladies wouldn't faint, but that was just one of our problems with them years ago, when they came down to the hops.

"Ah remember one young lady standing over there by the check room, saying over and over, 'Marcellus, if you don't find my bag, ah'm goin' to faint.'

"Ah told her that she shouldn't faint, because she might hurt herself faintin' right on the floor of the lobby, but that didn't do any good. She just said, 'Marcellus, my dress for the hop is in that bag, and if you don't find it, ah'll faint.'

"Ah was pretty worried," Marcellus continued, "so ah looked high and low, until ah found a bag which ah thought might be hers.

"'Is this your bag, Miss,' ah asked. It was her bag all right, but ah wasn't looking for what happened.

"'Oh, Marcellus,' she said.

"Ah caught her as she fell," Marcellus said proudly.

Hull Confident U. S. Will Greet Duke Warmly

State Department Not Officially Advised of Windsor Trip.

Although he lacked official information of the coming visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Secretary of State Hull said yesterday that he expected them to be welcomed warmly by the public and by the country generally.

Wives of State Department officers, it was learned, were going forward with their plans for "unofficial" entertaining of the Duke and Duchess, whose presence is expected to provide Washington with one of its most brilliant social seasons. The Duke, although generally thought of as a king who has abdicated, remains the ranking duke of the British realm.

If the Duke chooses to call at the British Embassy it was stressed that although he might do so "unofficially" he must be shown the deference due his rank. It was considered certain he would do so and that the Embassy would, as in the cases of official visitors, arrange an interview with the President for him. The President would not, however, return the call as he would do in the case of a reigning sovereign's visit.

Washington friends of the Windsors were inclined yesterday to believe the Duke and Duchess would not, at least upon their arrival here, go to Wye Hall, on a picturesque Chesapeake Bal island, as rumored. They are confident the visitors will go to Wakefield Manor, the estate of Mrs. George Barnett, at Huntley, near Front Royal, Va.

30,000 Minorcans Reported Starving

Perpignan, France, Oct. 6 (AP).—Thirty thousand residents of the Spanish government-held city of Mahon, on the island of Minorca, were reported facing starvation today. An urgent appeal for aid, sent to Spanish government sympathizers here, said the Valencia government had failed to provide adequate food supplies.

Employes' Beneficials Given Tax Exemption

Roosevelt Has Named 66 New Federal Judges

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department records showed last night that President Roosevelt since taking office has appointed 66, or more than one-fourth, of 241 Federal judges now sitting in United States courts.

The disclosure followed Attorney General Cummings' acceptance of a judicial conference report which recommended last week the appointment of 16 additional Federal judges.

Harvard Now Conforms In Shakespeare Spelling

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 6 (AP).—After 300 years, Harvard finally has decided to spell the bard of Avon's name "Shakespeare."

Prof. George Lyman Kittredge, famed Shakespearean authority, spells it "Shakspere," insisting that was the way the dramatist wrote it himself. But Prof. Kittredge retired at the close of the last academic year, and now the Harvard English department officially has added the "e" and "a."

Here Comes Mrs. Roosevelt - - There She Goes

En Route East with President Roosevelt, Oct. 6.—Several years ago the New Yorker undertook to note Mrs. Roosevelt's travels with a caricature that depicted her descending into a coal mine as two miners at the bottom of the pit casually remarked: "Here comes Mrs. Roosevelt."

The New Yorker's editors were surprised some months later to read that Mrs. Roosevelt actually had gone to the bottom of a coal mine.

Mother of five children—grandmother of six—Mrs. Roosevelt on this trip did everything anyone else did—and much more besides.

At Cheyenne when other members of the party huddled in their overcoats, she stood on the station platform for ten minutes talking with Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney in a silk blouse and skirt.

On the trip West she undoubtedly shook more hands than did the President and she made almost as many talks. In addition, she wrote her daily syndicated column, kept current her tremendous daily mail and supervised her two famous grandchildren, Sistie and Buzzie Dall. And she never complained about anything.

But the most arduous day she spent with the party included the trip to Victoria, British Columbia. When the day ended for the President, it virtually was just getting under way for Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt arose a few minutes after 7 a. m. at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, in Seattle. She dressed and breakfasted a few minutes after 8 o'clock. She helped her daughter, Anna, put the finishing touches on Buzzie and Sistie.

At 9 o'clock, with the President, she started in a torrential downpour of rain by automobile for the Seattle docks to board a destroyer for Victoria. At 9:30, Mrs. Roosevelt boarded the U. S. S. Phelps, ascending a gangplank in the rain and edging her way along the slippery deck to the officers' wardroom.

For the next three hours, Mrs. Roosevelt worked with her secretary, Mrs. Malvina Scheider, first dictating her daily column and then responding to a huge stack of mail which had been delivered during the night.

Approaching Victoria, Mrs. Roosevelt laid aside her work, adjusted her new hat—which, by the way, gives her a resemblance to Queen Mary—and stepped out on the deck to stand at attention with the President—in an aroma of dried herring—as the Canadian shore battery boomed out a 21-gun salute. The rain fell lightly.

After being greeted by Lieut. Gov. Eric Hamber, the highest representative of the British crown in British Columbia, and innumerable other dignitaries, Mrs. Roosevelt entered an automobile for the drive through Victoria to Government House for luncheon.

Again Mrs. Roosevelt boarded the Phelps, giving a last-minute scrutiny to her typed column, which was then sent to the radio room of the escort destroyer, the U. S. S. Porter, for transmission to a land station. Immediately the two destroyers raced away from the Victoria docks and crossed choppy Puget Sound to Port Angeles, Wash.

Then commenced the most amazing part of Mrs. Roosevelt's day. She was leaving the Presidential party at Port Angeles to fly back to the East.

In order that she might catch the night plane out of Seattle—which had orders to wait for her—Mrs. Roosevelt was transferred in open water from the destroyer Phelps to a Coast Guard launch, which sped her to the destroyer Porter.

Due to the inclement weather conditions it had been planned to keep the Phelps at Port Angeles to await any changes in the President's plans, and the Porter was to take her on to Seattle, 65 miles away. Almost an hour would have been lost had it been necessary for the Porter to come to the Port Angeles docks to get her.

There was only a narrow gangplank—nothing more than a catwalk—between the rail of the Coast Guard vessel and the deck of the destroyer. Both vessels were bobbing about slightly. Naval officers aboard the Porter seemed anxious about Mrs. Roosevelt's safety but she waved them aside as she sprung up on the gangplank, asserting: "Oh, I could jump over to that."

Immediately the gangplank was jerked back, a bell was rung ordering full speed ahead and the destroyer started on its way to Seattle. Mrs. Roosevelt dined on chicken soup, roast meat, rice and gravy, string beans, sliced peaches and coffee in the captain's quarters.

Rain again was falling in torrents when the Porter reached Seattle's harbor. In order to save time, it was decided to take Mrs. Roosevelt off the destroyer again in open water.

In the darkness a Navy tug bumped its rope-covered nose against the side of the destroyer, swung alongside and Mrs. Roosevelt stepped to the tug's rail and was handed down to its deck. The tug immediately started for the dock with Mrs. Roosevelt standing in the pilot house.

The dock to which the tug moored was several feet higher than the deck of the tug, with the result that the gangplank between the two rose upward at a sharp angle. The gangplank was without rails and as Mrs. Roosevelt climbed its slippery cleats, her only guide was a clothesline stretched between a sailor on the dock and another on the tug.

Adding to the perilous nature of her landing were half-a-dozen photographers on the dock constantly flashing blinding lights before her. The gangplank extended 3 or 4 feet over the edge of the dock—projecting into the air—so that when Mrs. Roosevelt got to the end of it she was forced to jump to the dock.

It was 15 minutes before her plane was scheduled to leave. She murmured that she did not wish to delay the airplane and entered an automobile for a fast ride to the airport. Boarding the plane at 9 p. m., Mrs. Roosevelt took a chair, spurning a sleeping berth.

She changed planes at Salt Lake City at 11:55 p. m., again declining a sleeping berth. She had a two-hour waitover at Chicago and hour wait-over in New York at 8 p. m. the next night.

And that was Mrs. Roosevelt's day.

COPYRIGHT, 1937, for The Washington Post.

At fairly close range President Roosevelt seems almost as robustly humans as Wallace Beery, in a well-bred way. . . . His broad sentimental streak is revealed in a desk cluttered with knicknacks and mementoes—it would give Herbert Hoover the jitters.

* * * *

He has a strong sartorial flair. . . . Likes to wear odd jackets, tweeds of unconventional hue. . . . One of his Norfolk coats, unless my eyes deceived me, is of a greenish tint. . . . But he is no precisionist in the knotting of his neckties.

* * * *

Occasionally he still reverts to the high starched collars, meeting closely in front, familiar in his earlier pictures as Assistant Secretary of the Navy and as candidate for Vice President and, still earlier, as candidate for the United States Senate.

"—a touch of the professor"

In his face remain the vestiges of the handsomest chiseled features ever seen on the national stage of modern American politics. . . . But this souvenir of the days when he was the Adonis of the Capital is now muscularly overlain with a bronzed and seamy ruggedness. . . . His good looks were undoubtedly a handicap to overcome.

* * * *

His face might be a sea captain's, a rancher's, a country squire—almost anything but a lawyer's face . . . But it has a mobility and sensitiveness rare in the bronzed outdoor type, given to flexible mannerisms which make him a set-up for mimics.

* * * *

In his voice there is a noticeable note of the didactic. . . . There is undeniably a touch of the professor about Mr. Roosevelt, which reminds one of Woodrow Wilson and the League of Nations. . . . Perhaps this is because the journalists whom he lectures twice a week (and his advisers, no doubt) give off such a youthful, flattering aura of eagerness to know, of trying to cope with the unfathomable.

* * * *

He loves to deliver little homilies with a strong historic flavor . . . And a pointed moral . . . There's a bit of a bite in some of his repartee, reminiscent of a crusty professor with a vein of humor keyed to smacking down a frolicsome sophomore class . . . Like some professors, he sometimes underestimates the wordly wisdom of his classes.

* * * *

He breaks into a smile with incandescent suddenness and an expectant upward lilt, as if confident his audience will chuckle with him. . . . It usually does, with hair-trigger reaction. In his speeches his humorous sallies, usually aimed at his adversaries' tender spots, bubble out compellingly, as if calculated to displace ten times their weight in heavy persuasion.

"—laughter is hair-trigger"

He is a big man among big men. . . . His great physique is conspicuous among such giants as Jesse Jones and Jim Farley—and the robust Farley, incidentally, looks a trifle foppish and roly-poly beside him. . . . To the elder pundits like Mark Sullivan his tone must occasionally seem a shade patronizing.

* * * *

It is difficult to imagine anyone else dominating the conversation in Mr. Roosevelt's presence, even if he were not President. . . . He has an amazing melange of knowledge on tap sufficient in depth to embellish his utterances with a kaleidoscopic variety of analogies, similes, all sorts of figures of speech. . . . And in his persuasive and expository passages he relies valiantly on the total validity of his analogies, though they are not always on all fours. . . . But they sparkle, and few people have the guts to catch him up.

* * * *

He is the most inveterate, untroubled optimist of this era, a sort of Machiavellian Jack Oakie. . . . You wonder if he ever succumbs to private misgivings, and you guess that he never does. . . . He is confident that Tommy Corcoran's statutes can outlive Tommy Jefferson's Constitution. . . . He has been through the worst troubles there are, and he fears neither death nor taxes.

School Board Backs Drive For Lunches

Officials to Co-operate in Benefits to Aid Needy Pupils.

Indorsing the civic movement to provide free lunches for approximately 5,000 needy school children, the Board of Education yesterday authorized the full support of Washington's public school system.

First, at the request of Mrs. Mary Steele, director of the WPA division in charge of lunches, the board accepted "sponsorship" through which it would help supervise the distribution of lunches. The board also agreed to maintain a central kitchen at 1640 Wisconsin avenue, where lunches can be prepared.

The board secondly promised active co-operation in the projected series of benefit shows to be presented by the Society of American Magicians, proceeds from which will go to the lunch fund.

Schools Not to Bear Cost.

There will be no school moneys expended for the lunches, except that needed for the maintenance of the kitchen, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, said.

The board gave Charles W. Townsley, vice president of the magicians' society, permission to use classrooms to publicize the shows, and to distribute tickets. The benefit shows will be given in a downtown theater.

Superintendent Frank W. Ballou reported that the number unable to provide themselves with noon lunches is substantially smaller than the number fed last June, when the WPA was providing the meals. A report from school officials, he said, shows that 1,800 white children, and 2,921 colored children are in need of free lunches. Last spring the number was 7,500.

Club Buys 50 Tickets.

The first tickets for the lunch fund boxing carnival October 18 were sold to the Old Rose Social Club, a colored organization which bought a block of 50. The quartermaster department of Camp Humphrey, Va., contributed $19 to the lunch fund.

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has accepted chairmanship of the projected chairty ball, the citizens' emergency committee for feeding hungry school children reported yesterdy. The ball will be held October 26, according to tentative plans.

Nearly 300 invitations were issued to presidents of civic and business men's associations for the luncheon to be held Friday noon at the Harrington Hotel.

Man Shot Accidentally By Stadium Policeman

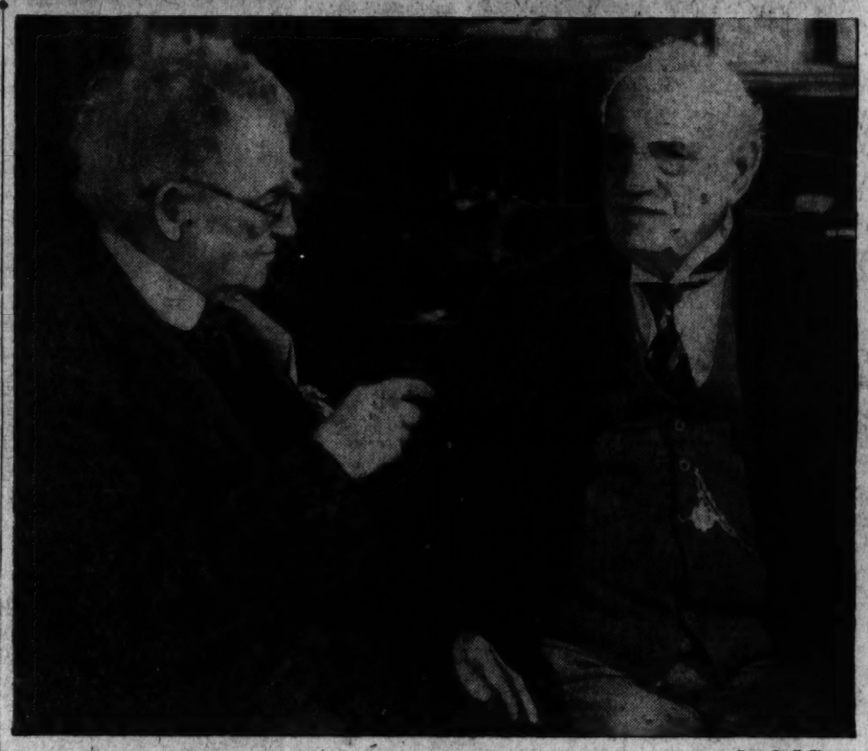
Anthony Izzard, 1914 Bohrer street northwest, was accidentally shot in the leg yesterday when a special policeman, employed at Griffith Stadium, fired at a colored man climbing out of a window of the ball club office.

The officer, John E. Henry, 44, of 1509 Lamont street northwest, said the bullet apparently struck the pavement and ricocheted, striking Izzard in the leg. Izzard was treated at Freedmens Hospital and released. Police last night were searching for the escaped colored intruder.

Housebreaking Charged.

Henry Milton, 35, of Laurel, Md., last night was charged with housebreaking at police headquarters. Milton was arrested in Laurel last Sunday after Detective Sergt. Frank Brass found a check, allegedly stolen from a safe of the Washington Beef Co.

Union Engine House Centennial Marked By Oldest Inhabitants Without Flourishes



Post Staff Photos.

As the old Union Engine House passed the century-mark last night, there were sentimentality and gayety in the historic structure. Above is a general view as the Society of Oldest Inhabitants met. Below are two of the most venerable members—John F. Woodworth, 85, and John R. Mahoney, 90.

President Noyes Warns of Bankruptcy if U. S. Denies Aid.

Among principal assets of the District of Columbia on October 23, 1837, were three public schools, 23,364 inhabitants, and the brand-new Union Engine House—which was dedicated on that date by a 10-mile parade that began at 10 a. m. and continued until sundown.

The hundredth aniversary of the engine house, at Nineteenth and H streets northwest, was celebrated last night at the first fall meeting of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, which has been using the second floor for its heaquarters since 1885.

One reason the new addition to the Fire Department created such a sensation back in 1837, it was pointed out last night, was that the Treasury had burned in 1833 because no one could find the engine house key. Government officials were so stirred they started a big fire equipment program, of which this house was the climax.

First Bankruptcy.

The District of 1837 had just undergone its first bankruptcy. This was due, President Theodore W. Noyes declared, to failure of the Federal Government to bear its full share of District costs. Although unable to attend the meeting, due to illness, President Noyes sent a message to the association declaring that what happened in the Administration of Andrew Jackson can happen today—and for the same reason.

"We are threatened with a bankruptcy such as that as a result of neglect by the Nation of the Nation's city," he warned.

The program for the celebration consisted of a report on "Washington from 1837 to 1937" by Col. Robert N. Harper, chairman of the entertainment committee; a historic sketch of the period by J. Claggett Proctor, chronicler who presided in the absence of Noyes, and music by the 121st Engineers Band of the National Guard, and by J. Eliot Ferry.

Growth of Washington was sketched by Col. Harper, who pointed out that bank deposits of the city in 1870 were but $2,500,000 and are today $312,125,000. Development of adequate waterworks is also a recent accomplishment, he said, reminding that President Taft declared the water of the District so bad "a man cannot see himself when he is taking a bath."

"We have progressed rapidly and always done our part as a city. We have obeyed the trumpet call to war and paid our taxes just as other cities, but have yet no voice in our government. We are just as loyal as the cities which vote, and I think we are entitled to the ballot," Col. Harper declared.

When the colonel came to Washington in 1886, he said, he rented a store under the Metropolitan Hotel. The hotel was six stories high, but had only one bathroom. "One of the jokes about town was about the length of the line waiting in front of the room on Saturday nights."

Jefferson rode down Pennsylvania avenue horseback and in the mud when he went to the Capitol to be inaugurated, Col. Harper said, expressing the view that if "we progress as rapidly in the next 100 years, the sky will be the limit."

Proctor said that scrutiny of 1837 newspapers shows that traffic conditions in that year "probably were as bad as they are now."

From 1842 until 1845, Proctor told the association, the second floor of the old engine house was used for the principal discussions regarding the free school system.

"Among the speakers appearing here in that connection was John Quincy Adams, who was probably the best informed man ever to sit in the White House.

Jesse C. Suter read the message from President Noyes and presented an 1837 newspaper account of the parade.

Col. John W. Oehman was welcomed into the association as a new member. Secretary James Duhamel called attention of the association to the fiftieth anniversary of Chronicler Proctor, held this week, and it was then pointed out that Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hauke, who have been married 56 years, were both in attendance at the meeting.

Among mementos presented at the meeting was a gun used against United States troops in the Boxer Rebellion in 1900. It was given by Frank H. Gummer, through courtesy of the Old Friendship Fire Company, of Alexandria, Va., and will join the hundreds of other relics adorning the walls and floor space of the historic old engine house.

New Animals Meet at D. C. Zoo To Discuss The Post's Contest

Late last night, when all was quiet at the Zoo, except for the snoring of Jumbina, the elephant, the new animals brought in last week by Director William M. Mann held a secret conclave to discuss the contest being conducted by The Post to name them.

(The secret would not have leaked out but for the stool pigeon in the bird house.)

The Chinese alligator presided over the caucus, because, in spite of the handicap of a Cantonese accent, his fellow newcomers figured it would take someone with a tough hide to keep order among killer cobras, tigers and leopards.

A woodpecker, drafted for the occasion, rapped on the desk for order and the first to take the floor were the shoebill storks.

"Awk," began the distaff side of the couple, "whatever they call us will be all right with me. (Her henpecked husband just blinked at that). I hope, though, that no one confuses us with the stork that—well, the stork. The only thing we deliver is shoebills."

"All I've got to say," contributed the lady orangutan, "is that no matter what they decide to call me, I'll still be more attractive than that other orangutan, Susie."

In the melee, every creature present received at least one name, but they weren't very dignified. So the contest is still on, and you may continue to mail your nominations to the Zoo Names Editor, Washington Post.

Chinese Alligator

No one knows just why there should be alligators in China and alligators in the Southeastern United States and none anywhere else but, anyway, that seems to be the case.

More to the point, National Zoological Park now has its first alligator from Old Cathay, so that reptile house visitors will have a chance to compare the Florida product with its Oriental cousin.

The new specimen is about 6 feet long and, even when fully grown, won't ever get to be more than half the size of the average American alligator. Since he looks very much like the New World species, it may help to distinguish him from the others if we point out that he wears no pigtail and speaks no English.

Baltimore Woman Promises Help for Capital Schools

Mrs. Marie O. E. Bauerschmidt, secretary of the Baltimore Public School Association, last night said her group would judge Congressmen from Maryland on the basis of what they do for public school education in Washington, in a meeting of the District Public School Association at the District Building.

Mrs. Belle C. Parker, vice president of the association, charged that playground facilities at the Grant School were overcrowded, and that the school building was unsafe. Mrs. Bauerschmidt answered with a promise of support "any time you have a particular problem connected with your public schools."

Mrs. Bauerschmidt, leader in the Baltimore Association for 18 years, discussed the drive for better schools in Baltimore. Among the features of the present Baltimore public school system, she listed "a politically free department of public health," a flexible curriculum permitting division of classes into smaller groups according to their speed of learning, and guidance teachers to help children select their courses and provide contacts for vocational placement.

Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee yesterday made another call on the Alcoholic Beverage Board in behalf of Leo J. Rossiter, cafe proprietor of 4132 Georgia avenue. He was accompanied by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

George W. Offutt, jr., chairman of the board, told the Congressmen that the board will take no action until either Rossiter or the opponents to his application for an on-sale liquor license move to reopen the case.

There were indications that the case, which aroused a storm of protest from school circles, might be reopened, although Offutt said he has no definite information.

Members of the ABC Board said they did not know what interest Schulte has in the case, but they believed Palmisano was concerned because Rossiter is a Marylander. Schulte is a member of the House District Committee.

The Rossiter case was continued indefinitely about a month ago, following a public hearing at which spokesmen for the Roosevelt High School, the Macfarland Junior High School and the Petworth Elementary School voiced objections to the application.

The school officials pointed out that the liquor dispensor would be in the midst of a populous school area.

The Board of Education also adopted a resolution opposing the granting of the license.

Ballou Assails Heat Neglect In Schools

Work on Boilers Job for Summer Says School Head.

Declaring that hundreds of public school children were sent home from classes on several days last month because of lack of heat in school buildings, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, yesterday vigorously protested the failure of District Commissioners to make necessary boiler repairs during the summer, when schools were unoccupied.

"There are still a number of school heating plants being repaired," he said, "and the only thing we can do on a chilly day is to send the pupils home."

This situation, the superintendent told Board of Education members yesterday, could have been avoided if District officials had acted promptly on notices that repairs were needed.

According to the superintendent, boiler repairs are still being made or have just recently been completed in plants furnishing heat for a dozen schools—Hearst, Petworth, Henry, Websters and Powell attended by white pupils and Terrell, Douglas-Simmons, Stevens, Burrville, Birney and Cranch schools for colored students. Some of these schools had to be vacated part of last week when the temperature of classrooms fell to 66 degrees or lower.

Dr. Ballou said the work done at the M street heating plant which supplies heat for three schools, the Terrell Junior High, the Douglas-Simmons and Cranch schools, was a case in point. Money for the repairs, he said, was made available in July, 1936, and the board urged the Commissioners to issue contracts for the work last March. Contracts, however, were not issued in time for the work to be completed by September. The job is now scheduled to be finished by October 15.

School enrollment is still lagging behind last year's figures, Dr. Ballou informed board members, although the difference is not now as great as it was at the beginning of the school year. With more than 91,000 pupils now in school, the present enrollment is about 200 pupils lower than last year's. The superintendent said he had launched a special investigation into the reasons for the decrease in school membership.

The board voted to put into immediate effect a course of instruction on the effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics for use in elementary schools. A similar course of instruction for use in junior high schools was submitted to the board, but action on it was delayed until a future meeting.

The new Anacostia Junior-Senior High School will be dedicated during the week of November 7 to 13 as a feature of the local observance of National Education Week, the board decided. Plans will also be made to hold receptions for parents and other open house events in other buildings, particularly those to which wings and annexes have just been added, during that week.

Comedy-Romance Coming to Palace Also Features Billie Burke and Reginald Owen at Their Best; A Little More on "Madame Bovary," at the National; Capital Visitors Make Speeches; Opera at Rialto;

IT SEEMED to me in watching the unspinning of "The Bride Wore Red," in the projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon, that in this screen adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's play of "The Girl From Trieste" there is a vague suggestion of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," played on the stage many years ago by Mrs. Pat Campbell. The resemblance does not proceed beyond the masquerade of a girl of low origin as an aristocratic socialite, and the methods—and largely the purpose—of the disguise, are not the same, but the similarity beetween them may give some insight into the general contour of the film play coming into Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow.

BELL.

In "Pygmalion" a flower girl was picked off the street and introduced to society with the aid of the deluding phonetics of perfected speech. In "The Bride Wore Red," a cabaret "artiste" from one of the lowest waterfront dives in Trieste is inducted into the slightly bewildering social usages of the upper social stratum, fortified only by a rich wardrobe and funds sufficient to maintain her in a life of resort hotel luxury for a fortnight. Both are comedy-romances, with the present subject laying rather greater stress on the romance than on the comic aspects of the story, which, nevertheless, are by no means negligible.

Joan Crawford is the bride of the film, who finally came to hate the glittering red gown she at first had thought so beautiful. It is a Joan Crawford not quite like any that has been seen recently on the screen. Probably in a spirit of concession to the natural requirements of the character, the star has seen fit to subordinate dazzling personal beauty to the severity of a plain, straight hair-dress and a minimum of make-up. Her eyes seem even larger and more lustrous than usual without the modifying effect of diminishing tricks of rouge pot and eye stick—which should be construed as reporting and not criticism.

Franchot Tone, in the opposite role, also follows a new line of repressed attack that was mildly presaged by his performance in "Between Two Women," and, for once, "gets the girl," as the simple village postman, in competition with the handsome young scion of a noble house of great wealth, momentarily thrown off his guard by the skill of the dissembling young woman's adroit pretending. The youthful wooer of two fascinating young women at once is portrayed with rather less buoyance than usual by Robert Young, who has not much opportunity for sprightliness.

This element of ready and sure comedy is left to the thoroughly schooled devices of Reginald Owen and Billie Burke, neither of whom ever has played better. Miss Burke is especially deft in her sly sallies at the genuineness of a strange girl whom she suspects from the outset, once again assuming her rightful place as one of the theater's most competent comediennes. Mr. Owen, of course, always may be taken for granted.

There are many others in the cast who contribute generously to the picture's effectiveness and not the least of its charms is the scenic background that has been provided for the major action. One suspects that these majestic natural settings were found in the Lake Tahoe region, although, like Miss Crawford, they masquerade convincingly as something they are not.

The thought persists, despite all I can do about it, that here would have been an ideal subject for Technicolor. It is an imposing piece of celluloid, even in the conventional black and white.

If a bitter and irreconcilable incompatability had not arisen Monday midnight as among a late final curtain, an early final deadline and a "tight" final edition, readers of yesterday morning's Post would know a little more in detail of "Madame Bovary" than they do now. They would have encountered, for example, a complete roster of the cast and been apprised that the three acts of the Theater Guild production at the National open with Emma's wedding night, when the good, but stolid and unimaginative Dr. Bovary goes to sleep on her hand while she is painting glowing word-pictures of the golden promise of their future together; that they progress then to her meeting with the chaste young idealist, Leon Depuis, whose love never expressed itself in words, the tempestuous conquest of her susceptibilities by the roue, Boulanger, and the fatal repetition of the Depuis infatuation. It would have been made clear, one hopes, that through this dramatic fabric runs the unbroken thread of debt and humiliation that prompts the escape of arsenic.

Then there was the matter of Miss Cummings' radiant beauty and the fact that Viola Roache, always dependable, as Madame Homais; Valerie Cossart, in the incisive role of Felicite, Emma's maid; Eda Heineman, as the senior Madame Bovary, and Hazel Hanna, in an amusing scene in the apothecary shop, add substantial fiber to the feminine aspects of the play. Another item that found its way into type, but never into print, concerned Benn W. Levy's shrewdly contrived English adaptation and Lee Simonson's uncommonly fine job in mounting the play, colorfully and artistically.

These were the opinions we entertained on Monday night and they have not altered with the passing of 24 hours. A smooth first-night performance will be accelerated to an earlier last curtain than opening night's 11:30, but it is to be doubted that the nine curtain calls will diminish as the week wears on, or that the capacity audience that greeted the Guild's first subscription play will grow less.

Having made some mention in this space yesterday of the activities of John E. Abbott, director of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, and Paul Rotha, assisting him for five months in the preparation of documentary films and other projects, it should be added now that the Messrs. Abbott and Rotha both were Washington visitors yesterday.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mr. Rotha, artist, author and authority on the motion picture, addressed the Film Society of Washington in the rooms of the Women's University Club at 1634 I street. The Film Society plans a series of ten Wednesday night programs, devoted to documentary and educational films of a nonprofit making nature. More of this later.

Another talk on the theater was made yesterday, when Stephen E. Mr. Vivian delivered an interesting and illuminating address on the playhouse and all of its important professional and social ramifications.

Washington music lovers who heretofore have been compelled to journey elsewhere to hear grand opera are guaranteed a fall season in their own city and their own right this year in the announcement that the Columbia Opera Company of New York will present nine performances in the Rialto Theater from October 18 to 24, inclusive.

The season, which will mark the debut of this highly successful organization in the National Capital, will be presented at popular prices comparable to those which regularly attract capacity audiences to the spring season of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York, the Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia, the Zoo Park, in Cincinnati, and the St. Louis Municipal Stadium. The most popular operas in the Columbians' repertoire will be presented in this city, according to General Director Armand Bagarozy.

This innovation is understood not to bear any relationship to the permanent future policy of the Rialto. That will be made known when, as and if determined, as we say over the ticker.

Prepares to Renew Film Career

In the full bloom of her beauty, Norma Shearer recently vacationed at Lake Arrowhead, before returning to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios where she will soon start work in "Marie Antoinette," her first vehicle under a new long-term contract. Miss Shearer's last picture, which won undivided critical acclaim, was "Romeo and Juliet," in which Leslie Howard played opposite.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 6.—Settin' Around (Columbia and RKO): At Columbia this morning I had a chat with Frances Marion, the famous scenarist. To most of you, she may be merely another name on a credit title, but to Filmville she is a personage as important as the greatest star. I think many of the girls who are pining for screen careers would be wise to heed her advice.

"Hollywood, today," she contends, "offers intelligent girls the greatest opportunity in the business world—not as stars, but as writers. Women take second place to men in the creation of plots, but, as continuity writers, they have the edge because of their flair for detail. Eventually, they will dominate that field. And a writing career in Hollywood is open to any girl who has the ambition to start in a studio as a stenographer or a secretary and work."

Over a period of 15 years, I doubt if there is a star in Hollywood who can match earnings with Frances Marion. Producers fight for her services—and say it with checks that would make a steel baron turn green with envy. What she has done, many of the college-trained girls who are blinded by the glamour of stardom, could do—if they were only canny enough to trade their exhibitionist complexes for a good second-hand typewriter. Hollywood makes pictures for women and the producers are eager to pay for the feminine "slant."

"Some day," says Frances Marion, "women are going to wake up and discover that the business is made to order for their conquest."

Gertrude Niesen, the famous blues singer of radio—and a red-hot fishing enthusiast—is playing a leading role in "College Follies of 1938." I found the company working in a set which represents the trophy room of a fraternity house, and Gertrude promptly took my arm, marched me across the set and proudly displayed a beautifully mounted dolphin that garnishes the wall. "The best dolphin caught last year, and I landed him myself—with my own little rod and reel!" she boasted. "I'm renting him to the studio—just to be sure they have the finest!"

"And that darned fish is costing the studio about $500 a day," the director interrupted. "Ten dollars a day rental—and $490 a day for the time we lose while Isaak Walton's little grandchild tells every visitor exactly how she caught it!"

Dropped in on the set where retakes are being shot for "The Awful Truth" and found things in a strange hubbub. On the sidelines stood a small, freckle-faced boy, sobbing as though his heart were broken. And in a far corner of the set, where a ventilator shaft pierces the stage floor, the whole troupe had gathered to shout advice to someone who, apparently, had wriggled down into the shaft. Irene Dunne finally soothed my curiosity—seems that yesterday the director sent out a call for a black cat, and young Freckle-Face had reported with his pet. Tom, terrified by the lights and noise, scurried down the ventilator, spent the night there and still was refusing to come out. Irene, touched by the woe of the small owner, had offered $25 reward for Tom's rescue—and the whole company had struck work in order to play Good Samaritan. When I left, the cat was still mewing, the boy still crying, and work was at a standstill.

Watched the filming of a dance number for the new Fred Astaire opus, "Damsel in Distress." In take after take, some member of the chorus muffed a step and spoiled the scene. Worst of all, everyone had become nervous and taut under the lash of the director's criticism. Suddenly, after a particularly bad take, Fred whirled onto the dance floor and into a comedy dance, tripping, fighting for balance and winding up with a "fall" that would have done Leon Errol credit. Everyone on the set roared—and relaxed. And the next take was perfect. A great psychologist is Mr. Astaire.

Trusts Architects.

Three Nice Gals Teamed in Film

The triple task of casting the title of "Sally, Irene and Mary," which went into production this month, was completed when Darryl F. Zanuck announced Alice Faye, Portland Hoffa and Joan Davis, respectively, for these parts.

Alice Faye's emergence as a dramatic actress of ability in the recently completed "In Old Chicago" has opened up a wider range of roles which the studio will make available to her.

Portland Hoffa is the wife of Fred Allen, radio comedian, who has one of the costaring roles in "Sally, Irene and Mary." Joan Davis is currently playing her biggest straight acting part in "Love and Hisses," with Ben Bernie and Simone Simon.

New Play Bills Mix Harmony, Tense Drama

Diversified Entertainment Promised for Ensuing Amusement Week.

Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone and Robert Young are the principal players in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Bride Wore Red," which comes to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is a screen adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's play of "The Girl From Trieste," concerning which something will be found in other columns of today's issue of The Post. The bill will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and a new release of the picturized "Events of the Day."

"Annapolis Salute," an RKO-Radio picture of life at the United States Naval Academy, filmed at that institution last June, comes to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater as chief photoplay feature of the bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow. The principal roles are taken by James Ellison and Marsha Hunt, supported by Harry Carey and Van Heflin. Several Washington girls appear in minor roles in this production, which was directed by Christy Cobanna. On the stage, Shaw and Lee, two of the old reliables of vaudeville's heyday, will headline the living entertainment, which will be augmented by Saul Grauman and company in a musical innovation; Josephine Huston, singing star; Fayne and Foster, a "A Symphony in Tunes;" Boy Foy, unicycle juggler, and Larry Blake in character impersonations.

"Music for Madame" will be the attraction on the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Nino Martini in the stellar role, supported by Joan Fontaine, heralded as one of the season's "finds." An added attraction will be the new issue of the "March of Time," in which Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York is celebrated as the new No. 3 man in American national politics and two other timely topics are dwelt upon. On the comedy side, "Hawaiian Holiday," first of the RKO-Radio releases of Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse cartoons in Technicolor, will hold first place.

Gladys George will come to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow in the title role of a new film version of "Madame X," in which Warren William will appear as the husband and John Beal as the son. The familiar story is said to have been given a distinctly modern dress in this new treatment without sacrifice of any of the play's poignance or dramatic power. The stage program for the new week will be Major Bowes' "Dixie Jubilee," a new departure in the Major's long succession of revues, all new and not in any particular a duplicate of any of the earlier units that have come to the Capital from the same source.

"Souls at Sea," Paramount's vivid melodrama of old slave-trading days, with Gary Cooper and George Raft in the pivotal roles, will renew its downtown run as foremost feature of the screen bill for the new week at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. The supporting cast includes Frances Dee, Olympe Bradna, Henry Wilcoxon, Harry Carey, Robert Cummings, Virginia Weidler, Porter Hall and Joseph Schildkraut.

Bing Crosby and Martha Raye will resume their F street run in "Double or Nothing" on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow. In this subject, the plot hinges on an attempt to run a shoestring into $5,000 in 30 days, with the winning of a girl thrown in for good measure.

"Rocky Mountain Grandeur" and "Have Courage" are the two outstanding featurettes announced for the new screen bill at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow.

Elisabeth Bergner in "As You Like It" will be the screen revival featuring the new bill at the Little Theater during the week beginning Sunday.

The famous half-pint comic, "Peanuts" Bohn, and his "Bon Ton Burlesquers" will provide the gay musical entertainment at the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the usual Sunday matinee. The feminine contingent will be headed by Doris Leland, Nellie Clark and Helen Vinton. A spirited chorus will supply background for the principals.

Following the current engagement of Machaty's production of "Libertine" at the Belasco Theater, the principal screen attraction will be a return engagement of the same director's "Ecstasy," one of the most discussed films of recent years, already well known to Washington audiences from numerous earlier presentations on the same screen.

A Cinema Siren in a Sarong

ganization program and has been approved by a recent conference of senior circuit judges.

He said the average man wanted quicker and cheaper justice.

Exhibiting a jauntiness and showing no fatigue from his 8,000-mile Coast-to-Coast tour, the President said he had observed on that trip several important things:

1. That there apparently was very little interest in methods, but a great deal of interest in objectives.

2. That there is a better understanding on the part of voters of what his Administration is striving for.

3. That crop conditions west of the Mississippi River are infinitely better than they have been at any time in the last four years.

Amplifying on the first point he said the general attitude was: Maybe the President is right, maybe the President is wrong, but we want the objectives.

In that connection, Mr. Roosevelt was asked what could be done to reach his objectives except what already had been proposed. He replied that was what he intended to talk about next week in Washington.

He said the between-session progress in preparing farm legislation and the advice of leaders to whom he would talk within the next few days would determine whether the special session were called. He added that three-fourths of Senators and Representatives he interviewed on his trip were in favor of the extra meeting.

The President was especially delighted with what he said was the reasoned understanding of people generally that the vast Public Works Administration program must be curtailed, that it is not necessary to keep 2,000,000 on relief, that the Administration's is not a hand-out program.

He said they understood, too, there must be surplus-crop control.

Asked if there was not a conflict between the Administration's vast reclamation program, which puts new acres to use, and control of crops, the President said there wasn't.

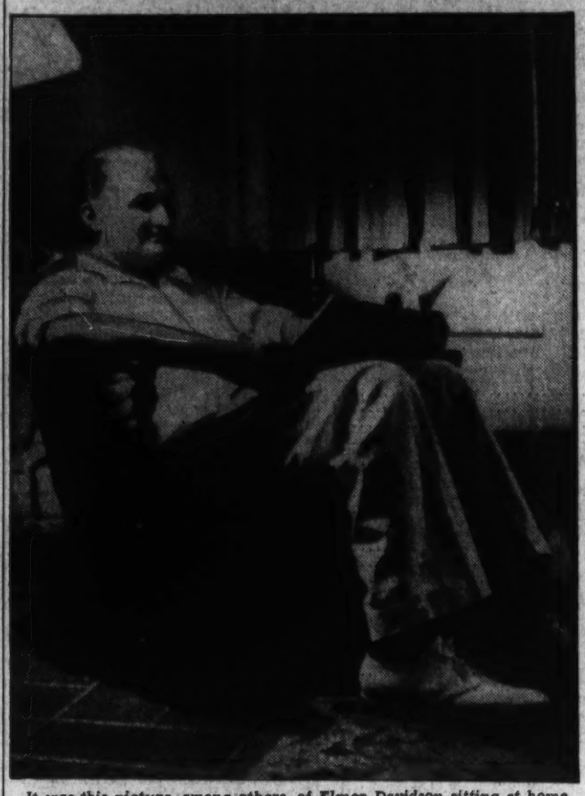
Picture to Aid Police in Murder Hunt



It was this picture, among others, of Elmer Davidson sitting at home by his favorite reading lamp, that police selected for enlargement to be spread throughout the section of nearby Virginia in which his body was found. Residents of the area, police hope, will recognize Davidson and thus help them to trace his movements prior to the slaying.

ices in the S. H. Hines funeral home and in Rock Creek Cemetery, plain clothes investigators kept a careful watch for strangers. The funeral, however, was attended only by close members of the family and coworkers at the Chamber of Commerce. Maj. Alfred C. Oliver, jr., chaplain of Walter Reed Hospital, read final rites.

Numerous incidents in Davidson's private life, which he apparently kept secret, have been uncovered during the slaying investigation. During last year, it was learned, he purchased approximately 1,500 gallons of gasoline from one filling station.

The middle-aged research expert, friends told police, seldom used his car during the daytime. Authorities estimated he would have to drive 60 to 75 miles a day in order to consume that amount of gasoline.

Police learned he bought 5 gallons of gas Sunday night about 9 o'clock. He was alone when he drove into the filling station.

Davidson, investigators have found, had meticulously kept track of every penny he spent. Yet no record has been found revealing reason for the large number of canceled checks.

The night he left home, Davidson received no telephone calls or visitors, it was learned. The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported no calls to the Randolph street address all day Sunday.

ON THE PAGE OPPOSITE THE COMICS

Food PriceRise Over Year Ago Reported Here

Sharp Upturn in Sugar Lifts Average 1.4% Higher for Month.

Mid-September food prices in Washington were six-tenths of 1 per cent higher than they were the previous month and 1.4 per cent higher than at the same time last year, the Department of Labor's Bureau of Statistics reported yesterday.

"The current increase is the result of seasonal advances in the cost of dairy products and eggs and of a sharp upturn in the price of sugar," the bureau explained. Costs here rose slightly more than in the country as a whole for the August-September period and slightly less than the Nation-wide average during the past year.

In 32 of the cities included in the report, prices were lower during September than during August. Seventeen cities besides Washington felt an increase.

The greatest increase here was in the egg market. Eggs were 12.1 per cent higher in September than in August. Sugar rose 4 per cent during that period. Smaller increases were noted in meats, dairy products, beverages and chocolate. Fats, oils, cereals and bakery products cost slightly less in September than in the previous month. The cost of fruits and vegetables was reduced by 5.7 per cent for that period.

Meat prices, which have been rising steadily all over the country, fell two-tenths of 1 per cent in September. Fractional increases were felt in beef products, lamb, roasting chickens and canned salmon, but a decline of 2.1 per cent in the cost of pork products offset this trend.

In September housewives paid 6.3 per cent for pork chops and 3.4 per cent more for sliced bacon than the month before. Their food budget amounted to 19.1 per cent more than in the fall of 1932, but 22.2 per cent less than in 1929.

James L. Stein was taken to the Emergency Hospital by the Clarendon rescue squad. His brother, on a visit from his home in Reading, Pa., was taken to the post hospital suffering from cuts about the face and body.

Alleged Forger Who Cost D. C. $10,000 Held

District police yesterday were notified of the capture in Baltimore of an alleged forger who is believed to have passed nearly $10,000 worth of worthless checks here in the past three years. He gave his name as Earl Bradshaw, 35, of Baltimore.

Bank statements of accounts in local banks which had been stolen from mail boxes were found in the suspect's car, according to information of Baltimore police. Detective Sergt. Charles Warder, of the check squad, was assigned to investigate the cases here.

District police have been getting complaints of the mail-box thefts since 1934. In each case, they said, statements and canceled checks were stolen.

Warder said the man made a business of the racket. He would steal the statements giving him the bank balance of his future victim. With this information and the signature copied from the canceled papers, the forger would present checks at the bank for payment.

Baltimore police said they have nearly 40 cases against the man which will be disposed of before he is turned over to local authorities.

Waitress Stopped As Speeder Loses Six-Mile Chase

Halted by traffic policemen yesterday on the Bladensburg road for speeding and directed to drive to a police station, a 24-year-old red-haired waitress, instead of obeying, sped away and led the law a chase for 6 miles, muc hof the way through downtown streets.

The policemen finally caught up with the girl, Hazel B. Petrella, of 1309 M street northwest, after she had struck two parked automobiles. She was arraigned before Judge Hobart Newman, on two charges of reckless driving, one of speeding, and one for operating an automobile on an expired permit. Her case was set for October 19 at the instance of her attorney, and she was released under $1,000 bond.

127 YEARS OF Reputation —AND BOTTLED IN BOND

ANY whiskey that has the long-time popularity of Old Overholt must be good.

But there's a special reason why this great straight rye is the fastest-selling U. S. bottled in bond whiskey.

It has a taste all its own—different as day and night—so sturdy, full-bodied and mellow you can use less of it in a drink and still have its keen flavor "come through."

That means, with all its quality, Old Overholt gives you economy too.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 16 and like so many others, have a problem on which I need advice. This past summer I met a very attractive boy at the beach where I was staying. There were several young people there, and as a rule, we formed a group in the evening to go dancing and the like; but several evenings this boy and I escaped the crowd and walked or talked or went sail-boat riding. He told me he loved me but said he would have to become of age before he could do anything about it. Both of us agreed to wait. Before admitting he loved me, this boy had told me of another girl to whom he wrote twice a week.

* * * *

Now, his parents do not care for me, although mine approve of him. On getting home from the beach I received a letter from him which read something like this: "This letter is the less difficult way out for both of us. There are two lights in my heart, each trying to outdo the other. Yours is the stronger but more dangerous; the other is weaker, but has most stability. I told you I loved you. I do and always will, but with my family constantly against us, and another person tugging at my conscience, I ask you to forgive and forget me." Please tell me how to go about winning him back. R. L.

* * * *

DEAR R. L.: Summer romances as a rule are as fleeting as summer itself. I don't think you have a ghost of a chance of establishing a mutual love relationship with this boy. Too many things are stacked against your ambition. There is distance and separation, his parents' opposition, the prior claims of the other girl, his fundamental loyalty to as well as affection for her, and last and most important, the boy's own decision to give you up; to stop fighting for the right to friendship with you. For that, in veiled form, is what his communicaton amounts to.

* * * *

It is proverbial that a young man opposed in love—when he really loves—becomes twice determined to have his way. When he gives up, it is either because he is a weakling or because he has decided the prize isn't worth the struggle. I imagine a little of both entered into the boy's about-face in this instance. No doubt he has a most uneasy conscience now for having made love to you. I dare say when he looks back on the summer resort interlude, it seems like a dream—something completely divorced from the reality of his everyday life and his comfortable association with a girl who is probably a family friend.

* * * *

I think you should, as he asks, forgive him and forget. Under the spell of the moon and the music at the summer resort, it was the most natural thing in the world that he should have gravitated to the side of some pretty girl, and, if she gave him any encouragement, spend his evenings speaking to her of love. The main difference between you and most other resort-going girls, is that the latter would not have taken him seriously. They would have considered themselves fortunate in having annexed an attentive beau for the duration of their resort stay; would have had as much fun as possible, and would have filed the episode away, when the summer ended, as a very pleasant memory and nothing more. M. H.

Young Mother's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young married woman, 20 years old. My husband is 23. He is a devoted, loving husband and we have a darling baby. We have no relatives here and very few friends, as we haven't lived here long. Our income doesn't permit of careless spending and we are saving something each week toward a home of our own one day.

* * * *

But here is the point. Having a small baby we can't go out much, so we have no one with whom to leave the baby; no one we know well enough to ask or to trust. And I would rather stay home with the baby than leave her anyway. I have been wondering how we could spend our evenings at home so we won't get so lonely. I feel that a husband should have a cheerful home to come to, yet I don't seem to be making mine such a cheerful place. Reading gets tiresome after a time, and I don't know many games that just two can play. Please advise me. B. B. B.

Turn Leisure to Account.

DEAR B. B. B.: Here is a problem which some of our young married readers with small children may be able to help us solve. Out of their own experience they may have suggestions to offer for pleasantly whiling away evenings on end at home. For my part I should say one's domestic diversions are largely determined by one's own intellectual interests, social gifts, imagination and resourcefulness. In my opinion, there is no more absorbing and constructive leisure-time occupation in the world than reading. It is never boring if one has access to good books, and possesses—or strives to acquire—a taste for good literature. Within the four walls of your own home, you may contact the finest minds of all times, through reading immortal fiction, fine plays, inspirational biographies, history, science, philosophy, etc.

* * * *

Perhaps if each of you would take up a course of study directed at some definite goal you wouldn't finding reading so boring. Perhaps your current reading is confined to a daily newspaper, a few inexpensive magazines acquired at random or light novels rented from a lending library. Such reading is bound to pall for it is so altogether unstimulating. Since you are married so young, unquestionably both of you could profit by an ambitious program of self-education, designed to fit your husband for professional advancement and you for keeping pace with his advancement. The foresight to turn enforced solitude to valuable account by devoting it to self-education has spelled fame and fortune for many a man.

* * * *

You and your husband are faced with a searching test of character, intelligence and resourcefulness. Are you going to waste these golden moments of your home-staying evening together, staring vacantly at each other and wondering how to evade boredom, simply because you can't think of any more card games-for-two to play? Or are you going to make a careful inventory of your undeveloped talents and half-educated interests and proceed to develop and educate them?

* * * *

Home is a magnet, a sanctuary for the man who looks forward each evening to peace and quiet in which to proceed with some well-loved work or hobby—be it study, making ship's models, toiling over a new invention or what-have-you.

New Twin Purses Answer Demand For Pocket Room

Both purses in the twin sets angle from the same frame. One holds the "vanities" of the hour, rouge, powder, smokes, the other the more serious things of life, such as passports, money and samples to be matched. Schiaparelli features twin purses in black antelope, mounted on rigid black frames, and set back to back with their flap closings turned outward.

Maggy Rouff goes one better in numbers with a triplet style—each dangling purse in a different color. She bunches suede purses in purple, green and red, on a single handle, and varies them in size as well as color. No need to think twice where the letter is, or the doorkey, when there's a bag, color and size both to help you.

Modern Babies Get Solid Food Often as Early as One Month

The new trend in child feeding is to supplement milk with other foods at an early age, says Mrs. Elizabeth O. Grant, specialist in nutrition for the District Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare.

Child Acquires Varied Taste Before Two Years Under a New Program; Public Health Aide Urges Mothers to Drink More Milk.

By Jean Green.

MANY old-fashioned methods are being upset by modern methods of feeding babies. Most members of the present generation didn't taste solid food until they were one or one and a half years old, but the modern baby gets cod-liver oil and orange juice at one month, egg yolk at nine months and cereal and vegetables as soon as the doctor deems it best.

One of the great values of such a program, according to Mrs. Elizabeth O. Grant, nutritionist of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare of the District Health Department, is that the child gains a varied taste before two years.

"This early period is the important period in which to teach the child to fit into the modern scheme of living," said Mrs. Grant. "This is the time when the taste of the child is becoming accustomed to a variety of foods. Unless this taste has been cultivated before the age of two, it is often too late."

Mrs. Grant, who organized the nutrition department for the Pittsburgh Public Health Nurses Association and has done much nutrition work in New York, is in charge of educational work being accomplished in the District for prenatal feeding and child feeding.

Milk Sufficiently Stressed.

While she has found that child feeding is no different in the District from other large centers, she believes that milk is not stressed in the diet here as it should be. That is especially true in prenatal feeding.

"Too often," said Mrs. Grant, "the expectant mother does not drink the proper amount of milk because she wants to give it to her children. But that is a mistaken idea, as the prenatal feeding of the child is just as important as feeding after birth."

Mrs. Grant would set no certain age when cereals and vegetables should be given a baby, saying that should be left with the family physician.

"By the age of two years," she said, "I feel that a child should have all vegetables except corn, cucumbers and radishes."

Meats are being added to the diet of infants at a much earlier age than formerly. "Liver is now often added to the diet at one year," said Mrs. Grant, "but, of course, the liver must be scraped and made into a broiled patty. The liver is especially good for the child, as it is rich in iron and minerals as well as proteins."

Boneless Fish at One Year.

Boneless fish may be added to the diet at one year, and lamb patties and chicken at the age of 14 months. Bu the age of three, children should have whole tender meat that has been cut by the mother.

Mrs. Grant listed pureed carrots, spinach, green peas and string beans as the first vegetables to be added to the child's diet. "These vegetables are mild in flavor and apt to be more popular with the child," she said. "They are also easier to digest."

By the time children are two or at the age when they start to chew well, Mrs. Grant feels that chopped vegetables should supplant the pureed vegetables.

"The tendency is for a mother to keep children on pureed vegetables too long," she said. "When they are older they do not like the taste of the textured foods. It is just as important to introduce the chopped vegetables at an early age as it is to have a variety of foods used."

Mrs. Grant also gave good pointers on that modern question as to whether the child should dine with grownups.

"I feel that a child is better off by himself or with children his own age until he is able to feed himself without embarrassment," she said. "This age would be between two and three. At this time he should be getting many foods likely to be on the table and he should be able to handle his food successfully. This early experience at the table is excellent as it aids in developing a feeling of maturity. However, it is very important that a sensible attitude prevail. Often during the first period food is dropped on the tablecloth or milk is spilled. If the child is fussed at when this happens it turns him against the foods that caused him the trouble."

Three Feeding Stages.

Mrs. Grant pointed out three stages when feeding problems were likely to arise. The first is when the child is introduced to solid foods. "Because a child is not accustomed to it, he does not like the taste of the solid foods," she said. "But the mother should not give up too soon. The same problem is encountered when the child first learns to walk. The experience must be tried over and over again. The child must become accustomed to the feel and consistency of the solid food before he likes the taste of it."

The second problem is encountered when the child goes on the three-meal-a-day schedule. The mother is accustomed to feeding the child often, but the child quickly learns to adjust itself if the mother has patience. Often when the child is begging for something to eat between meals it is thirst rather than hunger, and water or fruit juice is equally satisfactory.

The third problem is encountered when the child is two years old and is allowed to sit at the table with adults. The child must be made to realize that there are certain foods that he cannot have until he is older.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 6.

AS YOU KNOW, if you follow these dispatches, ship arrivals are pretty cold soup to me. I spend a great deal of my time fighting on piers and it takes something extra-special in the passenger line to agitate us old wharf-rats. One of those things materialized the other morning when the Normandie slid in, bringing the 20-year-old French film actress, Danielle Darrieux.

ALICE HUGHES.

This beauteous Babe from Bordeaux is the star of "Mayerling," an excellent French film now packing a local theater week after week, her partner in the picture being our adopted Dream Boy, Charles Boyer. Dan's extraordinary young beauty, and evident talent, has already stirred thousands of us citizens, and I was on the good old dock shortly after 7 one morning to eye her. And the kid, who is Hollywood-bound, almost stole the show from such people as Sonja Henie, Doug Fairbanks, jr., Mrs. Vincent Astor and Ramon Novarro. Not even Mary Garden and Cole Porter got more than a fast glance.

Young Darrieux poled in wearing a mink coat over a brown checked suit with a brown felt hat and brown suede shoes, all very smart. She's a laughing sort of kid, as befits her tender years. With her is her husband, Henri Decoin, a writer-producer whose fourth wife this child is. He says she completes his marital cycle. She weighs a mere 110, and has a lovely voice—learned English in three months, and speaks it mighty well already.

I go into the matter of Dan to this extent because, given smart treatment and the breaks out West, she is going to be a first-rate figure in American films—perhaps another and gayer Luise Rainer. If there's one thing a reporter likes, it's to furnish advance tips. That's what this is supposed to be!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of "Mayerling," I took a party to it a few nights ago—about my fifth view . . . I guess I like it. As its French poured out of the horn behind the screen from the lips of Charles Boyer, a woman to my rear leaned over to her chum and croaked, "Dosen't he speak French well?" Which was my 1937 high for movie cracks . . .

* * * *

Doug Fairbanks, jr., is headed for the film version of our stage hit, "Having Wonderful Time," opposite Ginger Rogers . . . Clinging sternly to the movies, "Stage Door," with Ginger and Katie Hepburn, is going to be one of the wonders of this season. Hepburn again proves herself potentially the greatest actress in Hollywood, with a wondrous performance that matches her work in the memorable "Morning Glory." This is a tip straight from the paddock . . .

* * * *

Cecil Beaton, the British photographer of lovely women in a cloud of tulle, is back in town, ready to focus his trick lens on the 1937 crop. He's also launching a book called "Cecil Beaton's Scrapbook" . . . Mrs. Hortense Odlum, divorced wife of the financial Floyd, is celebrating her third anniversary as president of a famed Fifth avenue store—with eclat, and also a spot of gala . . .

* * * *

Mrs. Edward A. Hughes, widow of Thomas A. Edison, just came back from a trip to Russia. "We should be glad we're Americans," she told me. How true, how true! In a few weeks the Soviet land will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Bolshevik triumph. A great show in the Red Square—but oh, behind the scenes!

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Balanced Diet Offers Plenty of Food and Variety.

By Ida Jean Kain.

NOW HONESTLY, did you ever see so much food as you can have on the balancing slimming diet? I even get complaints about it!

You don't have to subsist on weak tea and toast to get down to normal weight. If you learn the trick, you can twist your menus around to provide all the food you can eat, and you can slim down.

In reducing, you are required to keep the calorie intake down to two-thirds the normal allowance, for a loss of one to two pounds a week. But by leaving off the trimmings you can have a lot of food on your reducing allowance. By "trimmings" I mean those fancy fatteners that make a diet rich in calories without adding very much to the quantity of the food. On your reduced calorie allowance you can have more food by leaving off these extras than by any other method.

It's the little things that add up to pounds—cream, butter, bread, sugar and salt. Have the cream in your coffee, but measure it. One tablespoon is only 30 calories. You are allowed one-half pat of butter with each meal, and if you want more there is a butterless spread on the market which is free from calories.

As to bread, you can have three slices a day. You may want to supplement this pittance with some of the low-calorie biscuits, of which there are innumerable varieties.

You even can have sugar, but measure the amounts to keep within your calorie limits, for little grains of sugar can play havoc with a reducing diet. The important thing is to keep an eagle eye on desserts.

While you do not ordinarily think of salt as contributing to your weight, it really can be a nuisance. Salt is a factor in water retention, and if you want to lose weight on schedule, decrease your salt intake to the minimum. You will learn to like your food just as well with half the salt you are using.

Substitution enables you to have more trimmings. Make your own using a calorieless oil:

FRENCH DRESSING by this recipe,
Clove of garlic
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash of cayenne
Black pepper
1 tablespoon Tarragon vinegar
3 tablespoons oil

Mix the dry ingredients in a bowl in which the garlic has been placed. Add the oil and vinegar slowly, and pour into a jar. Shake well.

The art in reducing is to slim down without going hungry, and the balanced menus, minus the trimmings, make it possible for you to do just this. As long as you lose 1 to 2 pounds per week, why complain that I give you too much food?

Broadcloth Suits Stage Comeback

Paris (U.P.).—Duvetyne and broadcloth of satin smoothness have staged a comeback and are used for handsome suits and dresses in black and deep, rich colors.

Heavy daytime woolens for coats and suits are woven with mannish stripes and blocks worked unobtrusively in the background, there are plaids, geometrical designs and sports tweeds. In contrast to the rugged appearance of sports suit wools, blouses are made of soft colorful woolens that lend themselves to detail and draping. Jerseys are lovelier than ever and are made into simple tailored frocks set off by white trim.

Silk jerseys, rough and smooth crepes, satins and satin-backed crepes are popular for afternoon costumes. Rayon contributes plain crepes, firm to the touch and giving the appearance of light-weight wool.

Person Need Not Deny Himself Butter or Cream.

Bath Oil Stimulates Beauty and Vitality

Was a time—and not so very long ago either—when a Russian lady to enjoy the ritual of the bath to the fullest, seated herself in a stone oven while attendants poured on a sizzling water that formed steam on contact with the stone. Then in order to restore the victim, a slapping with oak leaves followed the baking. All for the purpose of stepping up the bloodstream and stimulating circulation so that a lady would look glowingly alive as she faced her admirers. It's lots easier now. Two or three drops of Abano (the Georgian word for bath) oil, and aside from perfuming the water and softening it, it has a strange type of fragrance that buoys the senses. The best way to use it is to drop in your bath oil before you draw the water so that the pressure of the water diffuses the particles of oil and lets the scent emanate from the tub and the room.

Notables to Converge On Capital This Season

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With the Duke and Duchess of Windsor coming over, you'd think there wouldn't be much spotlight left for the famous figures in the world of art and literature who are scheduled to visit Washington this season. But chances are, there are some people who would every bit as soon see a top-flight novelist or a famous portrait painter as the former belle of Baltimore and her royal husband.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Well, maybe not. But the nice thing about it is we won't have to choose—if we're lucky; for from now until Christmas it looks as if the Capital is to draw celebrities in droves.

Now on her way to America is Susan Ertz, famous novelist, who is expected to arrive in Washington October 16 to visit her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Coleridge Ertz. She is coming over in connection with her latest book, "No Hearts to Break"—the story of Betsy Patterson, another Baltimore belle who won a husband of royal lineage.

Shortly after Miss Ertz lands in New York, she will go to Detroit to deliver a couple of lectures and then she will come on to the Capital, where a number of social functions are to be given in her honor. While no formal lectures are yet on her Washington calendar, she will be guest speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club and probably will be deluged with invitations to talk before other groups.

Photograph Favors Duchess of Windsor's

I've said it before in this column, but in case you've forgotten—Miss Ertz favors the Duchess of Windsor, judging from photographs of both. The novelist parts her hair in the middle, and did long before she ever heard of the former Wallis Warfield. Furthermore, for a good many years she has worn trim, tailored attire very much in the fashion recently popularized by the Duchess.

While Miss Ertz was born in London, her parents are American, and she has spent much time in this country, and still has numerous family ties here. Her sister, Mrs. Mary E. Will, lives in Rochester; one brother, Lawrence Ertz, is a resident of Los Angeles, and the other, who has been in Washington for the past three years, is with the Civil Service Commission.

In private life, Miss Ertz is Mrs. J. Ronald McCrindle, wife of the manager and director of the British Airways.

Press Party at Wakefield Manor

Mention of the Duchess of Windsor reminds me that Wakefield Manor, the historic Virginia home of Mrs. George Barnett, which has been suggested as the American domicile for the famous couple, will be the scene of a party for ladies of the press on Sunday.

Mrs. George Barnett, gracious chatelaine of the lovely estate, will entertain members of both the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Women's Club at a buffet luncheon on that day; and from what I can hear, just about every one of the 170-odd will be there.

Wakefield Manor has been famed for its parties many years, and especially so since it has been the home of Mrs. Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps.

Mrs. Dillingham Visiting Here

One of the most feted of current visitors is Mrs. Walter Dillingham, of Honolulu, who quietly slipped into town a few days ago and has been the guest of Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, wife of the director of the RFC, since Sunday.

Partying for Mrs. Dillingham, who has a host of friends in the Capital, has been quiet but constant ever since she arrived. She and Mrs. Henderson will leave today to visit friends in the Virginia hunt country, returning to Washington for the week-end and then leaving again for visits in Maryland.

Mrs. Dillingham's daughter, Betty Lou, is in Foxcroft School again this year, while her sons, Ben and Walter, are in Harvard College. According to present plans, Mrs. Dillingham will be in the United States most of the winter, and probably will be joined here later by her husband, who makes a trip to Washington almost every year.

I've heard a good deal about the Dillingham home in Honolulu. Considered one of the loveliest estates in the world, it is also famous for the hospitality of its owners, whose friendships extend around the globe.

Col. W. A. Ayres, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, was guest of honor at a dinner given Monday evening at the Greenbrier, in White Sulphur Springs, by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lanigan, of Chicago. Following dinner, the party, which included a hundred guests, attended the ball given in the Cameo ballroom, where Meyer Davis, of Philadelphia, conducted the Greenbrier ensemble.

Many from Washington now are at this resort hotel, where dinners, teas, luncheons and cocktail parties are being given in more numbers than ever before. Y., will become the bride of Russell Whiting Nichols, of Washington, on Saturday afternoon in the Unitarian Church, Winchester, Mass. The Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, son of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, former president of Harvard University, will perform the ceremony. A reception will be held at the Brae Burn Country Club in West Newton.

Mr. Nichols is the son of Mrs. Walter W. Nichols and the late Mr. Nichols, of Washington, and formerly of Melrose, Mass. He is associated with the Farm Credit Administration of the National Government. The couple will make their home in Washington.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

NOT ONLY our most eligible bachelors are lured away from Washington to live in New York; but also some of our most attractive "extra gals." Just after hearing that Suzanne Wilson had decided to desert the Capital in favor of Manhattan we learn that Olivia Stokes also will make her home there this winter. In Washington for a day this week after a summer in the Southwest, she left almost immediately to return to New York and will make her home there with her brother, Isaac Stokes, formerly with the Securities and Exchange Commisison here and now with a New York law firm.

CANON AND MRS. Anson Phelps Stokes are again at their Massachusetts avenue residence after a stay at their place in the Berkshires. Their daughter will be missed in Washington this year, as she took an active part in our civic and social life. Besides being one of Miss Mabel Boardman's right-hand young aides in Red Cross work, Olivia was popular here at dinners and dances.

AND SO he'll go sailing by the light of the moon. This means Lieut. Norman Sears, of course, who has been appointed commander of the trim Sequoia, official yacht of the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson. He replaces Lieut. Robert Campbell, who is off to London to wear gold braid as Assistant Naval Attache at our embassy there.

Lieut. Sears will find his duties aboard the Sequoia particularly heavy during the summer when the Secretary makes regular week-end cruises with a party of guests aboard.

A MODERN HOUSE is being built in quaint Georgetown. Its occupants will be Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, who returned a short time ago from a summer in Marion, Mass. They are stopping at the Anchorage until their new place, for which Rudolph Stanley-Brown is the architect, is completed.

It's hard to understand why the Smiths could leave their old house, even for a nice new one. Their former home is in that historic Georgetown block of high-ceiling colonial houses, one of which, once occupied by the F. Trubee Davidsons when he was Assistant Secretary of War, has been bought by Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth.

The Smith's new residence is near the junction of Wisconsin avenue and R street. This neighborhood verges on the slummy, but, typical of Georgetown, it only takes one pioneer to make a field day for the remodelers, who follow closely the trail thus blazed and redecorate all around to the tune of soaring rents.

THE SERT ROOM of the Waldorf Astoria has obtained the services of the husky-voiced Eve Symington for its opening. She will sing at the Sert room twice nightly during the forthcoming autumn and winter season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stinson Back From Honeymoon Tonight

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whitla Stinson, whose marriage September 27 in Bar Harbor, Me., came as a surprise to many of their friends here, will return to Washington tonight after having spent a few days at the St. Regis in New York.

Following their quiet wedding at the Maine resort, they visited Canada, stopping in New York on the way back to the Capital. They will be at home in Mrs. Stinson's residence at 2419 Wyoming avenue.

If—as seems likely at this time—they decide to remain here through the winter season, they will be valuable contributors to both social and artistic activities in Washington. Mrs. Stinson, formerly Mrs. William Livingston Crounse, has lived here long enough to be considered one of the city's "cave dwellers," and is widely known for her literary accomplishments.

Writing under her pen name, Pepita Crounse, she is the author of two published books of verse, "Through Remembered Windows" and "Fold of Dreams." The former was centered around memories of her childhood spent in the Southwest and in Mexico.

Mr. Stinson also has chalked up honors for himself in the literary world, having written a number of articles on the League of Nations and the World Court. His chief creative pursuits have been focused on painting, however, and his watercolors have attracted favorable attention.

After his graduation from Columbia University, where he specialized in architecture and civil engineering, Mr. Stinson became attached to the State Department as attorney in the Latin-American division. At frequent intervals he studied art, continuing courses he had begun in Italy before his formal education was finished. He has exhibited in New York, Philadelphia, at the Chicago Art Museum and at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. In recent years he has divided his time between Washington and Warrenton, where he also has a home. He was formerly maried to Harriet McKee.

G. W. U. Hospital Board Celebrates 39th Year

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The Women's Board of George Washington University Hospital yesterday gave a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel honoring its president, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, who has recently returned from a trip to the Orient, and marking its thirty-ninth anniversary. The first fall business meeting of the board preceded the luncheon, at which Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, past president, presided.

Other past presidents seated at the table with the officers were Mrs. Frederick W. True, who served for eight years, and Mrs. Howard Hodgkins, who was president in 1905 and 1906. Also present were Mrs. Samuel E. Lewis, a charter member, who has been treasurer of the board for 34 years. She reviewed its long history. Mrs. Earl B. McKinley, whose recently arrived home from a trip with Dr. McKinley, dean of the Medical School of George Washington University, to Manila and China, also was present.

Mrs. Grosvenor Tells of Her Tour

Mrs. Grosvenor, who is entering her fourth consecutive year as president of the board, served prior to 1934 also, having been elected the organization's head eight times. Charter members in addition to Mrs. Lewis, who are still active include Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. James Spalding, Mrs. William H. Weaver and Mrs. Christian Heurich.

Mrs. Grosvenor told of the trip aboard the China Clipper, on which she and Dr. Grosvenor went to the Orient, and described the hospitals she visited in China, Spain, the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands. None of them, she said, had a more co-operative board of women giving its support than has George Washington University Hospital. Mrs. McKinley also talked briefly on her trip to the Far East.

The luncheon was in charge of Mrs. Charles R. Mann and Mrs. Willard Hayes Yeager, co-chairman; Mrs. J. Russell McNitt, Mrs. Norman Ames, Mrs. James Pixlee, Mrs. Gustav Emery, Mrs. Walter Bloedorn, Mrs. McKinley, Mrs. Norman Smith and Mrs. Louis Weller.

Reports Presented At Business Session

Reports were presented by officers and committee chairmen at the business meeting preceding the luncheon, at which Mrs. Grosvenor presided. The special teams last spring raised more than $1,400 for the dispensary of the hospital, it was announced, by a series of entertainments and voluntary contributions to the fund. This plan was followed instead of that of sponsoring one large entertainment as in previous years.

It was decided to issue a year book, bringing the membership list up to date. Mrs. Mann, Mrs. Yeager, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. McNitt and Mrs. Emery were appointed as the committee in charge. Other committees announced were: Auditing, Mrs. Charles Holmes and Mrs. Cabot Stevens, co-chairmen; decorating, Mrs. Emery and Mrs. Irving Hall, co-chairmen; entertainment, Mrs. Ernest Daniel and Mrs. G. L. Weller, co-chairmen; internes, Mrs. E. C. Albritton and Mrs. John Reed, co-chairmen; library, Mrs. Alfred Lawson and Miss Bertha Gay, co-chairmen; membership, Mrs. William H. Aspinwell and Mrs. W. A. Bloedorn, co-chairmen; nominating, Mrs. William C. Borden and Mrs. McKinley, co-chairmen; nursery, Mrs. McNitt and Mrs. Yeager, co-chairmen; publicity, Mrs. Frank B. Steele and Mrs. Henry A. Albers; sewing, Mrs. James E. Pixlee and Mrs. Norman Smith, co-chairmen; Sunshine committee, Mrs. Ames and Mrs. William Winslow, co-chairmen; president's committee, Mrs. Borden, Mrs. McKinley and Mrs. Yeager.

The officers, in addition to Mrs. Grosvenor are: Mrs. Marvin, Mrs. Byrnes and Mrs. Vincent du Vigneaud, vice presidents; Mrs. Lewis, treasurer; Mrs. Emery, recording secretary and Mrs. Mann, corresponding secretary.

Women's City Club Begins New Year

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley presided last night at the opening business meeting of the Women's City Club, of which she is president, with Miss Miriam Edwards, new recording secretary, assisting. About 60 members gathered on the second floor of the clubhouse because of the redecorations in progress on the first.

Miss Dorothy Dorian announced educational courses in Spanish, law, public speaking, short story writing and parliamentary law, which will open on October 18. Mrs. Frank A. Birgfeld, chairman of the house committee, announced a card party for the afternoon and evening of October 15. Other reports were made by Miss Julia Hopkins, chairman of finance; Miss May Belle Raymond, treasurer; Mrs. Dorothy Butler, bulletin editor; Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, chairman of ways and means; Judge Mary O'Toole, chairman of life membership, and Miss Roberta Tull, of the French section, which is one of the most popular in the club.

Wellesley Club Hears Security Board Member

The "mechanics" in the office of the Social Security Commission of keeping an accurate pay roll record of 32,000,000 persons were described by Miss Mollie Dewson, new member of the board, and one of Wellesley College's distinguished alumnae, at a meeting of the Washington Wellesley Club last night. The meeting was at Beauvoir, lower school of National Cathedral, with Mrs. Andrew Taylor, vice president of the club and head of Beauvoir, as hostess. Other speakers were Mrs. Gerritt S. Miller, jr., and Miss Mary Louise Bartlett.

Miss Dewson, who resigned as vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee in order to serve impartially as a member of the Social Security Board, described her reactions as a newcomer, observing the smooth operation of the office.

It is like a factory, she said, with machines which do practically everything but talk. Each man's record is kept separate from all the rest without confusion, and the year's figures will be available in January. Employes are preparing now to take them from the machines and enter them on the records when they are complete. Although the vastness of the undertaking is almost staggering when contemplated as a whole, the process is simple when the mechanism is understood, said Miss Dewson.

Not only was she impressed with this, but also with the plan of promotion by merit within the organization which has been worked out by the board. There are 26,000 employes, most of whom are under civil service. With the normal movement and shift in so great a force of workers and the natural expansion which takes place in an organization, there is opportunity to reward superior work by promotion, and this is being done under a well-planned system. The result is increased effort and interest throughout the office, she says.

Miss Dewson, who was graduated from Wellesley in '97, celebrates her fortieth anniversary as an alumna of the college.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Harry B. Caton, president of the club, and by Mrs. Hamilton Alexander and other members of the 1900-1910 decade. An informal buffet supper was served following the meeting.

Mrs. Grant Speaks To Soroptimists

The Soroptimist Club was addressed at its weekly luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel by Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, who told of the work of the Tuberculosis Association of the District, of which she is president and managing director. Her discussion was illustrated with slides, shown by Edwin S. Potter, publicity manager for the organization.

The Soroptimists, who have been actively interested in the work at Glendale Hospital and the children's camp, were given opportunity to see the progress made by the children under the wholesome conditions provided for them. Mrs. Grant closed her talk with an appeal for the purchase of T. B. stamps.

Mr. Beach, of the American Red Cross, also spoke, describing its work in disaster relief and home hygiene and urged Soroptimist members to enroll during the roll call.

Music for the meeting was provided by Enid Mitchell, who won the recent "Quest for Talent" award among Government employes. She sang, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downs, one of the club members.

Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, regional director of the South-Atlantic region of the American Federation of Soroptimists, announced the fall conference would be held in Washington October 16, opening at 3:30, with dinner at the Raleigh at 6:30. The next session of the Washington Club will be a business meeting next Wednesday night at 6:30 at the Willard.

All of the decorations in the house and on the table were carried out in autumn flowers and the refreshments were in the same color schemes.

The ROWAC Club has monthly business meetings, luncheons and programs at the homes of members on the first Wednesday of each month. On the third Wednesdays members meet to sew, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frank Loeffler. They make garments for the loan closet of the District Chapter and the emergency supply closet of the National Red Cross. These meetings begin at 10 o'clock in the morning and continue all day, with portable electric machines, brought by the members, humming as they work.

Among the members present yesterday were: Mrs. Edward H. Cavin, Mrs. William DeKlein, Mrs. Walter S. Gard, Mrs. J. Blain, Gwin, Mrs. Neville Hall, Mrs. James A. Hendricks, Mrs. Ernest P. THE WASHINGTON FILM SOCIETY formed last winter had two distinguished guests at its informal meeting yesterday afternoon at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse—Paul Rotha, British film authority, and John E. Abbott, director of the film library of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, who was in Washington with him for the day.

They had been at the Department of the Interior, conferring with Fanning Hearon, director of the division of motion pictures, and one of the organizers of the Washington Film Society, and it was at his invitation they attended the meeting.

Others present were Miss Matilda Young, of the Children's Theater, secretary; Mrs. Raymond C. Miller, of the Little Theater; A. A. Mercey, Don Craig, Iris Walker and Roy Strykar. Robert L. O'Brien is president of the society; Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, chairman of sponsors, and Admiral Mark Bristol, treasurer. During the winter, its program will include films not generally shown commercially.

A TEA for faculty wives of the Graduate School of American University was given yesterday by Alpha Chapter of Phi Delta Gamma Fraternity for graduate women, at the school, 1901 F street. Mrs. Frederick Crocker, president of the chapter, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, wife of the chancellor.

IRENE VIVIAN WRIGHT, who works at the Treasury Department by day, studies at the National School of Law thereafter and is treasurer of Phi Delta Delta Sorority Alumnae, is not just a "career woman" despite her flair for lawbooks and columns of figures—she can bake pies! Not long ago the eight lucky persons in her office had proof of it when she baked one and served it to them.

There are complications in pie-making for one who combines business and baking. Miss Wright's apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel is equipped with a kitchen, but she had neither pastry board nor rolling pin. The top of the refrigerator served for the one and a drinking glass for the other—and the pie was elegant, according to reports.

BUT—don't be expecting pie from every girl in Washington by the name of Irene Wright, for maybe they can't all bake, and there are five by that name in the city directory. 'Count 'em if you don't believe me.

HELEN GAUKER, chaplain of Phi Delta Delta alumnae chapter, is going to Philadelphia this week-end to attend the Province convention there Saturday and Sunday. New officers of George Washington University chapter of the sorority are Louise Wilson, president; Mary Stallings, vice president and treasurer; Ella Cooper, secretary; Eva Kelley, chaplain, and Lois Adams, chancellor.

PATCHWORK quilts will come into their own tomorrow when an exhibit will be sponsored by Dorcas Circle of Hamline Methodist Church on Sixteenth street. Members in colonial dress will serve refreshments. The hours of the exhibit are from 2 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m., with Mrs. Edna B. Rochester in charge of the display.

Comptometer Club

The Washington Comptometer Club will have a dinner meeting tonight at Ruty's Cafe, Eleventh and F streets, at 6:30, followed by dancing from 9 to 1 o'clock.

The club, founded last December, has bowling, tennis, swimming, horseback riding, roller-skating and bicycle groups as well as regular meetings and social affairs. William Howard is its president; Miss Elisabeth Pichette, vice president; Henry Dugan, recording secretary; Miss Vera McGonigal, corresponding secretary; William Gallagher, treasurer, and Robert Taylor, sergeant-at-arms.

L'Enfant's Life Lecture Topic Of D. A. R. Here

John Clagett Proctor, historian, will discuss the life of Pierre Charles L'Enfant, designer of the City of Washington, before Major L'Enfant Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, at the opening meeting tonight at 8:30 at the home of Mrs. Edward G. Wright, the regent. Named for the distinguished military engineer and builder of cities, the chapter has long been interested in preserving historical data associated with L'Enfant.

Miss Margaret Fraser, who represented the chapter at the dedication of a Revolutionary marker in Ashland, N. H., on September 18, will bring pictures of the ceremony at which the marker, presented by Major L'Enfant Chapter of Washington, was accepted by the New Hampshire D. A. R. and placed on the grave of Hercules Mooney, distinguished soldier and patriot. The dedicatory address was given by Miss Fraser.

The meeting will mark the opening of the season's activities in the patriotic and educational work of the organization.

YANKS WIN SERIES OPENER, 8 TO 1

2,500 Fans See Teams Play in Mud

By Jack Munhall.

In a game as lacking in thrills as a solitary ride in the Old Mill, Eastern High School scored early in the second period to nip Central, 6-0, yesterday in the Eastern Stadium as the 1937 interhigh school football series opened.

While some 2,500 fans sweltered in the humid heat, the two slow, heavy elevens slid, sloshed and repeatedly fumbled on a field, still soggy from heavy rains. Neither impressed onlookers that the crown now worn by Tech is even slightly endangered as far as they are concerned.

The Lincoln Park eleven presented two crack backs in Al Kidwell, who scored the only touchdown on an off-tackle smash from the 6-yard line, and Bill Kemp, 1936 all-high center, now playing quarterback. The Eastern line proved fairly strong, especially in the middle, but the weak offense offered by Central could not be classed as an acid test.

The Eastern ends, Dick Wade and Jack Kearney, showed themselves good blockers, and the former was invaluable on the receiving end of passes accurately tossed by Kidwell, all-high fullback.

Central again demonstrated that its combined attack could not sway a feather in four downs. In fairness to the losers, however, it must be mentioned that the absence of Lou Chacos, regular halfback, and the team's only potential scoring threat, and Hugh Cramer, all-high tackle, was never so noticeable as yesterday afternoon. Chacos is laid low with a sprained ankle, while Cramer is nursing a dislocated elbow.

Goldsworthy Criticized.

Goldsworthy, Mount Pleasant quarterback, drew many criticisms for his continual defensive plan of attack even after Eastern had taken the lead. Several times in the third period, Goldsworthy kicked on third down when only 2 or 3 yards were needed for a first down. In one particular instance in the waning minutes of the third stanza, Central had possession of the ball on its own 30-yard line, where two nice gains by Will Barr had moved it from the 20. Here on the 30 with but 2 yards to be gained for a first down, Goldsworthy elected to punt, although it was only third down. That questionable piece of strategy halted Central at a time when it appeared to be clicking and never again did the blue and white clad boys threaten.

Eastern's and the series' initial touchdown was made possible by the running and passing of Kidwell who almost single-handedly led the advance. Receiving Goldsworthy's punt from the Central 5-yard line on his own 35, Hal Speith, hefty Eastern halfback spun, up to the Eastern 43 and then turned over the chores to Mr. Kidwell.

On the first play after the run back of kick, Kidwell faded to his own 37 and shot a low, hard pass to Murray in the flat zone. The play was good for a total of 16 yards and a first down on the Central 27. Speith was stopped for a 1-yard gain on a right end run but on the following play Kidwell again took to the air for another first down.

This time the pass was taken on a spectacular grab by Wade who continued until dropped on the Central 17. Kemp cracked right tackle wide open and slithered to the 6 before blasted down by Charley Jones, Central center, who played a whale of defensive game. Kidwell made 4 yards through right tackle but the play was voided as both teams were ruled off sides.

Kidwell Takes Ball Over.

However, Mr. Kidwell was not to be denied and so on the next play the boys stayed on their own sides of the line and Mr. Kidwell lugged the leather over the goal behind beautiful blocking. Kirk Miller, a linesman, was sent in to add the point but his placement was wide.

Statistics give Eastern a deserved edge. Central was able to accumulate but three first downs, and its farthest advance was to the Eastern 23-yard stripe in the second quarter. This drive started from the Eastern 38, where Jones had blocked Murray's kick and Bill Ickes flopped on the ball on the 45.

From the 45 Goldsworthy, after throwing wildly on two passes intended for Sam Fox, finally hit the grasping hands of the lanky end on the Eastern 23. But this danger was averted on the next play, when the alert Kidwell darted in front of Fox to intercept a fourth flip from Goldsworthy.

Central uncovered a promising looking end in Shannon Cramer, brother to the better-known Hugh, who was a terror on the defense, repeatedly spilling the Eastern runners whenever they chose to run his end. Jones, backing up the Central line, and Kemp, performing the same duty for the winners, ran a close race for efficiency. Kemp retained an edge by intercepting no less than three enemy passes.

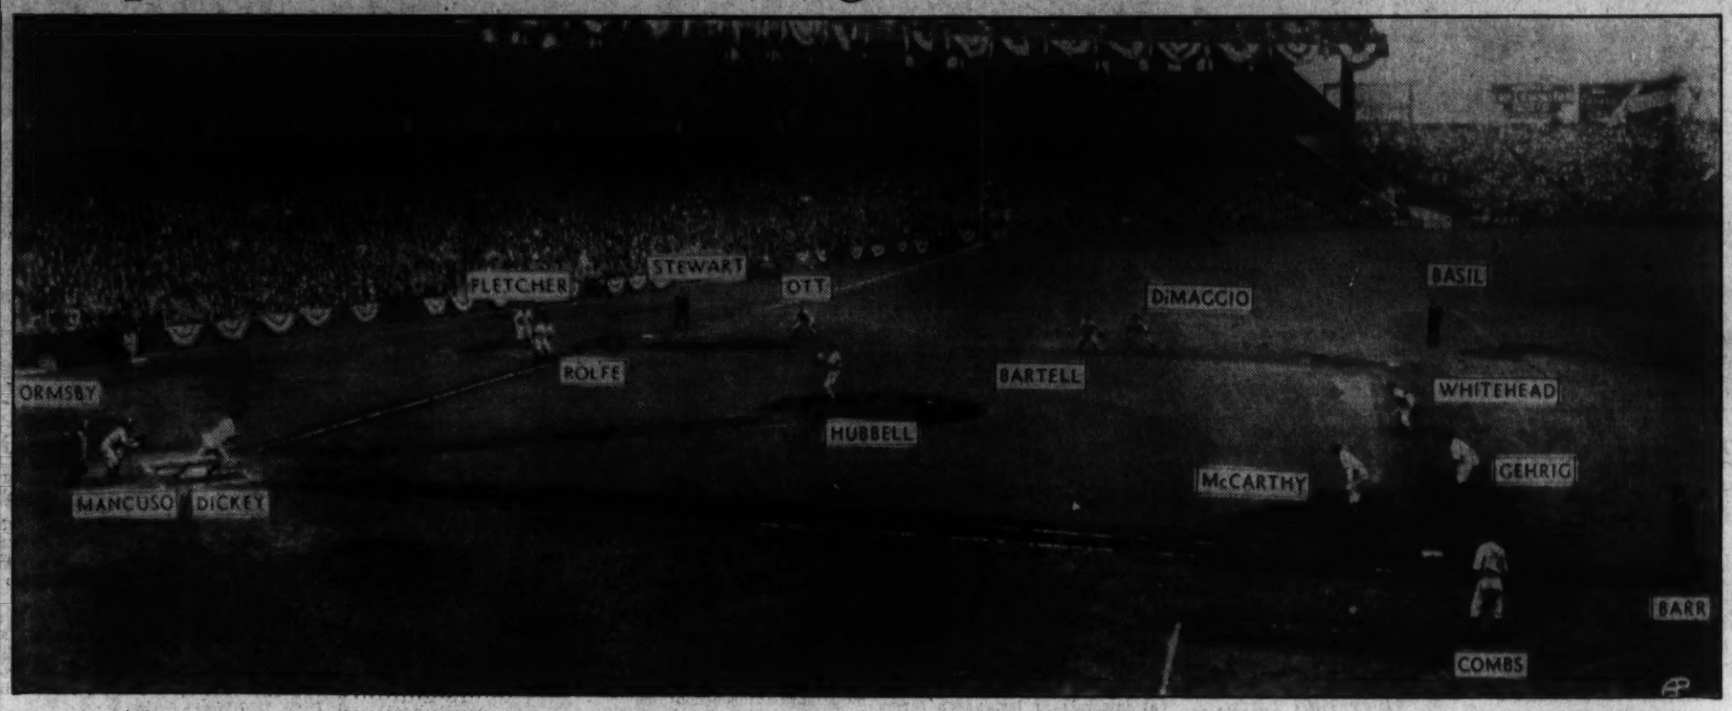
Wirephoto: Scene in Sixth Inning as Yankee Bombardment Started



This general view of the World Series game yesterday shows the high spot of the sixth-inning rally that won for the Yankees. With bases loaded and none out and two runs already across, Catcher Bill Dickey, of the American League club, shown at bat, completed the rout when he whacked a sharp single. The collapse of the Giants became complete when Hubbell was yanked after pitching to the next two batters. Seven runs went over in this inning before DiMaggio flied out to end the period. Fletcher and Combs are coaches.

Ruffian Belligerents, Well What About These Yankees?

By H. I. Phillips.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Yankee Stadium, Oct. 6.—If President Roosevelt wants to quarantine all ruffian-belligerents he will have to include the Yanks.

As violators of international law, the rights of smaller people and the code protecting pitchers from ruthless slaughter, Col. Ruppert's rifles rank with any European outlaw in the business.

With a score of 8 to 1, but which seemed more like a victory by four or five touchdowns, the Yankees seem to have made the whole thing a moral question for the consideration of Geneva.

H. I. PHILLIPS.

Nearly everything happened in the sixth when the Ruppert fusileers staged a bombing act that did not respect open towns, neutral boundaries or noncombatants.

Mr. Hubbell took a worse shelling than those Shanghai department stores or any part of the Wangpoo River, and it was pathetic to see him finally take it on the lam for a neutral embassy.

Up to the sixth Carl had been doing great work in a pitchers' battle that had the customers yawning, but the pitcher that goes oft to the Yanks is broken, as the old adage says.

When Carl went out he was given as great a cheer as was ever given a loser, with the possible exception of the liege defenders and Tommy Farr, and you can get an idea how the incident affected the rest of of the Giants by the fact they tried to put two pitchers in his place.

After announcing that Gumbert would relieve him, Coffman walked out and there was a long pow-wow before officials that still has the fans puzzled.

We don't know what it was all about either, except that the umps, even though their hearts were breaking, saw to it that only one of them pitched against the Yanks at a time.

No matter what may happen in this series from now on, Gumbert will stand out as the player who got the greatest break. He was only allowed to pitch one ball to a Yank before he was hurriedly withdrawn.

The sixth inning will live in history with the great bombardments of history. It lasted longer than a parade to Hitler and the bases were so

Mrs. Vare, Miss Miley Eliminated

Mrs. Newbold, Mrs. Hill Beat Favorites in Memphis Play.

By Kenneth Gregory,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 6.—Spectacular matches took a toll of 24 players today during "Sudden Death" Fairway firing, with Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Pennsylvania, and Miss Marion Miley, of Ohio, among third-round casualties in the 1937 Women's National golf championship.

The veteran Philadelphia shotmaker, six times winner of the American golfing crown, was upset, 2 and 1, by Mrs. Charles Newbold, the Kansas State champion, from Wichita.

Miss Miley, ailing after running a high temperature last night, succumbed, 3 and 2, to the sharpshooting of Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City.

Elimination of these two ranking stars featured progression of the tournament into the quarter-finals, scheduled for 1:45 p. m., Central standard time, tomorrow over the Memphis Country Club course.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Greensboro, N. C., medalist for the second successive time, advanced through the two rounds without signs of the struggles noticeable in other matches.

The North Carolinian defeated Jean Bauer of East Providence, R. I., in the third round, 5 and 3, after trimming Mrs. George D. Brantley, of Jacksonville, Fla., 5 and 4, earlier in the day.

Mrs. Peggy Chandler, Dallas, Tex., staged the day's most sensational rally to enter the round of eight where she engages Mrs. Page. Five

With Shirley Povich

New York, October 6.

If you happen to be rising a few bobs on the Giants in this World Series, I hope you can afford to lose the money because there was no evidence this afternoon that the Giants are worthy of mention in the same inhalation with the Yankees.

POVICH.

Puerile on the attack, woeful on the defense and helpless to stem the native batting power of the Yankees even with the great Hubbell on the mound, the Giants were outslugged, outpitched and outmaneuvered by a team that threatens to romp through the series perhaps in four straight.

It was typically a Yankee triumph, with the opposing pitcher, even though his name was Hubbell, finally cracking under the terrific pressure of pitching to that dangerous Yankee batting order. For five innings he could do it, and masterfully, but in the sixth, well, you know what happened.

* * * *

And if Hubbell, who won a game from the Yankees last year, can't stop 'em, then there is small chance that any other member of the Giant pitching cast will. Southpaw pitching was supposed to trouble the Yankees. Well, the Giants today served 'em what was supposed to be the best southpaw pitching in the league and the only guys who were troubled were the Giants.

* * * *

It was Giant defense that was supposed to narrow the margin of favoritism the Yankees normally enjoyed, but today while the Yankees were playing a superb defensive game without error, it was the Giants who cracked in the field. It was a bit of shoddy work by both Billy Bartell and Burgess Whitehead that piled high the grief for Hubbell in that big sixth inning and charged him with three unearned runs.

* * * *

Good pitching — by Gomez—stopped the Giants who never were any great shucks as hitters anyway, but even good pitching apparently can't stop the Yankees. When Lou Gehrig failed to get his hit, there was always somebody in that Yankee batting order to fill the breach. Guys like Frankie Crosetti and Red Rolfe who normally strike little terror into opposing pitchers, stepped up there today and delivered important singles in that sixth inning.

* * * *

And on the defense it was the Yankees, with their flair for World Series heroism, who starred—not the Giants. In the first inning, when Bartell singled to left, it was a fancy piece of running and throwing by Myril Hoag that held that blow to a single. And in the fourth inning, when Melt Ott threatened to make something out of his sock over second base, it was Tonny Lazzeri who ambled over there, snatched the ball with a pretty pick-up and from far off balance got away a superb throw to Gehrig for the putout.

The Giants could prevail against National League teams with only one run, but they couldn't prevail against the Yankees. It was with a supreme show of confidence that the Yankees actually conceded that 1-to-0 lead to the Giants in the fifth inning, when they chose to play for a double play instead of the possibility of cutting off a run at the plate. No single run would beat them, they reasoned rightfully.

As if the Yankees' presence in the series were not discouraging enough, the Giants are now burdened also with World Series tradition that portends a sad fate for the team that loses the opening game. In the 33 years of World Series play the team that has lost the opening game has come back to win the series only 11 times, which should be no consolation to the Giants.

In fact, last season the Giants couldn't win the series, even with the advantage of winning that opening game, if you remember. Hubbell beat the Yanks with seven hits in the opener, and the American Leaguers went amuck, taking four of the next five games to end the series in six. Today, incidentally, was the first time in their last five World Series that the Giants have lost the opening game.

Until Tony Lazzeri hit his home run in the eighth inning, the hardest swat of the day was delivered by Hubbell, himself, who sent George Selkirk scurrying back to the rightfield fence for his long fly in the third . . . It was just another ball game for the Yankees, apparently . . . Neither Lefty Gomez or Bill Dickey took the trouble to run out infield grounders at any time during the afternoon . . . Only the Yankees, in a supreme contempt for anything less than a solid swat, can get away with that kind of base running . . . Walter Johnson was the most-photographed man around baseball headquarters today and yesterday . . . In a chinfest, Johnson revealed that the night before he pitched and lost the opening game for Washington in the 1924 World Series, he was awake until 3 in the morning attempting to procure tickets for his friends . . . And took a rap for more than $150 worth of tickets when certain friends didn't show up to claim 'em . . .

Cubs Trim Sox, 7-3, in City Series

By William Weekes.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The National League Cubs fitted up a rousing 15-hit assault with Tex Carleton's brilliant pitching in the Chicago City series opener today to conquer their American League rivals, the White Sox, 7 to 3.

The Cubs, second-place team in the older league, and for the first time in years the underdog in this civic baseball strife, spotted the Sox a two-run lead in the second inning, then opened up with an attack that drove 37-year-old Teddy Lyons out of action in the sixth inning, and did Bill Dietrich no favors the rest of the way.

Screw Ball Ace Shelled From Slab

Hubbell Puzzles Foes for 5 Innings, Then Loses Contest.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 6.—Loopholes in the usually impeccable defense of the Giants, followed up quickly by a burst of base-hit fire, enabled the world champion Yankees to rout Carl Hubbell and romp off with an easy 8-to-1 victory today in the opening game of the fifth all-New York series for baseball's highest honors.

For five innings the screwball mastery of the lean southpaw ace of the Giants dominated the fog-shrouded stadium and thrilled a surprisingly big crowd of 60,573. For five frames Hubbell held the Yankee powerhouse to one lone single and outpitched his left-handed rival, Vernon Gomez, as the Giants gained a one-run margin. Then came the deluge.

Striking with characteristic suddenness, in the sixth inning, the Yankees took advantage of the breaks to drive Carl Hubbell from the box, roll up seven runs, and remove all doubt about the outcome of the game.

Walk Start Fireworks.

Hubbell paved the way for his own downfall by lapsing in control and passing Gomez at the outset of the fatal sixth. Then, after Frank Crosetti singled sharply to left, came the costliest "break" of the inning. With Red Rolfe at the plate, Capt. Gus Mancuso of the Giants had Gomez trapped far off second base with a snap throw to Dick Bartell, only to have the Giant shortstop drop the ball. Gomez scrambled to safety, Rolfe singled to left to fill the bases on a short fly that Jo-Jo Moore couldn't quite reach, and the doors were open wide.

Joe DiMaggio cracked the first pitch to left-center, to bring home the first two runs, and the parade was on. DiMaggio got an extra base on the throw-in, Lou Gehrig was intentionally passed to fill the bases again, Bill Dickey scratched a single off Whitehead's glove, Myril Hoag hit into a force play at the plate, and George Selkirk belted a single to right that brought home the fourth and fifth runs.

Selkirk's base hit drove Hubbell from the box and introduced a comedy touch to an otherwise tragic crackup for the National League champions. A slipup in announcing the southpaw's replacement forced the Giants to send Harry Gumbert to the box as first relief, instead of Dick Coffman, who was Manager Bill Terry's intended selection. Gumbert pitched to only one batsman, Tony Lazzeri, whose sharp grounder went through Whitehead's legs for an error and brought over another tally.

Coffman Forces In Run.

Coffman then took the hill and promptly forced over the seventh and final by walking Gomez and Rolfe in the process of finally getting the Yankees out.

All told, an even dozen Yankees went to the plate. The seven runs were manufactured by only five singles, combined with two errors and four bases on balls, Gomez, by walking twice in the same inning, set a world series record.

In the fifth, Augie Galan, Cub left-fielder, singled, went to third on Lonnie Frey's single, and scored as Carleton hit into a double play.

Singles by Herman, Joe Marty and Frey, mixed with doubles by Frank Demaree and Phil Cavarretta, sent the Cubs ahead in the sixth with a three-run blast and drove Lyons from the mound. They wound up their scoring in the eighth when Cavarretta's single, Marty's sacrifice, a double by Galan and Frey's triple, accounted for three more runs.

The second game will be played tomorrow at Comiskey Park, with another pair of righthanders—Curt Davis, for the Cubs, and Vernon Kennedy, for the Sox—as the pitching choices.

Gomez Hurt; His Big Hit Was Wasted!

By Henry McLemore.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 6.—The angriest guy in the Yankee dressing room—believe it or not—was Vernon Gomez.

While his mates screamed "we did it," as they stomped in from the playing field, Mr. Gomez, who had just won the game, uttered a string of phrases which are not repeater in nice company.

Gomez was sore because he was robbed of what would have been his greatest batting streak in history. He had walked twice in the seventh inning. In the eighth he belted out a beauty—but Hank Leiber speared it with a beautiful one-handed catch.

"Imagine that," spouted Gomez between gulps of a bottle of beer. "Me hitting a double in a world series game and then getting robbed of it. Nuts!"

"I'm a ball player," Gomez responded, "not a crooner."

Next he was asked if he thought he would beat the Giants again. That hurt Goofy to the quick. He stretched himself up to full height—with his trousers dangling about his knees — and proclaimed with dignity:

"I never make predictions—Dizzy's with the St. Louis Cardinals."

The other Yankees were very reserved. They sat around drinking beer and smoking cigarettes before going to the showers. Suddenly, a guard waltzed into the room bearing four new automobile tires. He dumped them in front of Tony Lazzeri.

Manager Joe McCarthy did nothing but beam and accept congratulations. He said Charlie (Red) Ruffing would work tomorrow.

Next door, in the Giant dressing room, it was like a morgue. Twenty minutes after the game ended Carl Hubbell still was in uniform. He looked as if he couldn't comprehend that he had been beaten. He was so dazed that reporters' questions fell on deaf ears.

"The Yanks are a tough ball club," Manager Bill Terry said. "When they get started, they're hard to stop. We'll come back though and make a battle of it."

Carl Hubbell Shelled From Hill; Yanks Win

The Yankees collected only seven base hits, one more than their rivals, but they made them count. Their sixth inning outburst, typical of the way they blasted the Giants at intervals in last year's series, broke up what looked like one of the great southpaw duels of world series history.

Hubbell's defeat, his second at the hands of the Yankees in as many years, but his first in three opening game assignments, was a bitter blow to the National Leaguers. It put the issue for tomorrow's second game squarely on the towering shoulders of Cliff Melton, sensational freshman southpaw, who will match throwing arms with Charles Rufus (Red) Ruffing, Yankee right hander.

The victory for Gomez, who was in danger only once and coasted home after the big Yankee outburst, was his fourth straight in world series competition. The slender Californian has yet to taste defeat in championship battle. He needs only one more triumph to match the World Series records of Jack Coombs and Herb Pennock, each of whom achieved five victories, without a single setback.

The Giants collected half of their six hits and their only run in the fifth, when a double play aided Gomez in escaping from serious trouble. Red-headed Jim Ripple and Long John McCarthy started this frame with base hits. With runners on first and third and none out, it looked like the break of the game. Ripple scored as Mancuso grounded into a double play, Crosetti to Lazzeri to Gehrig. Whitehead stroked a two-bagger down the rightfield corner but Hubbell rolled out to Gehrig.

Otherwise no Giant got past first base. Bartell's single was wasted in the first. Moore started the sixth with a single to center, but the big guns of the batting order couldn't do any damage. Mell Ott and Hank Leiber were held hitless all afternoon by Gomez, who displayed speed as well as control from start to finish. The Yankee southpaw didn't issue a pass until Ripple walked with two down in the ninth.

Hubbell started shakily, but quickly recovered control. Crosetti walked and DiMaggio singled in the first frame, but Gehrig and Dickey were easy victims on high flies to Leiber. Pitching deliberately and seemingly getting better as he went along, Hubbell retired 14 consecutive batsmen before the situation got completely out of control in the sixth.

Four Runs Earned.

Four of the seven Yankee runs in the sixth were earned, but with better support from the keystone pair, Bartell and Whitehead, Hubbell might have escaped real damage. He was on the spot so quickly, with the tide running against him, that he didn't have either time or opportunity to regain his poise or mastery.

Despite heavy over-night rains, overcast skies throughout the morning, and a mist that made visibility poor for the outfielders, the huge Bronx stadium housed a much bigger crowd than had been expected. The paid attendance was only about 6,000 short of the world series record of 66,669 set in a Sunday game here last year.

The total gate receipts of $234,256 were not far from the record of $240,591, set simultaneous with last October's crowd mark.

The players' "cut," for the first game, amounts to $119,470.56 and indicates the likelihood of a new record. Last year the total player pool, taken from receipts for the first four games only, amounted to $460,002.66.

H. I. Phillips on the Series full most of the time that a lot of people thought two golf foursomes were trying to putt on the same green.

It was like a fight between Joe Louis and Shirley Temple and similar in all departments to the classic encounter between little Eva and Simon Legree.

At this writing the series would seem merely a meeting between fate and nine men working for Mr. McCarthy.

Former President Hoover sat in a box all through the game recognized by only a few people. The report that he went out and consoled Hubbell after the game, saying that he knew just how it was, cannot be confirmed.

Big Jim Farley, who is reported ready to give up the Franklin Agency for the Pierce-Arrow, was on hand and remained until the last district was reported.

He must have thought the Yanks were playing Alf Landon.

Slab Mixup Puts Noses In Rule Book

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 6.—The mix-up over selection of a relief pitcher to succeed Carl Hubbell for the Giants in the sixth inning of today's opening World Series game against the Yankees left any number of baseball men baffled, even after examination of the rule book.

There is no rule in the book which applies to the specific case which came up when the Giants wanted Dick Coffman to take Hubbell's place, but gave Harry Gumbert's name to the umpires instead.

Baseball officials, however, said the rule which applied apparently was that dealing with starting pitchers. Section 5 of rule 17, it reads:

"When the umpire announces the pitcher prior to commencement of the game, the player announced must pitch until the first batsman has either been put out or has reached first base."

Although it does not refer to relief pitchers inserted during the course of a game, those acquainted with the book said that law applied in the case of new pitchers.

Catcher Gus Mancuso took the blame for the mix up. The Giant captain misunderstood Manager Bill Terry's shouted order and thereupon gave Gumbert's name, instead of Coffman's, to Umpire-in-Chief Ormsby. The loud-speakers announced Gumbert's entry, while Coffman was on his way to the box from the bullpen.

Coach Art Fletcher, of the Yankees, called attention to the rule when the Giants attempted to rectify the mistake. Gumbert was ordered to the box.

Wirephotos: Lots of Action as Yankees Humble Giants in Series

World Series fans asked for action and got plenty of it at the Yankee Stadium in New York yesterday as the Yankees defeated the Giants, 8 to 1, in the series opener. Left—Tony Lazzeri, Yankee second sacker, grabbed a tricky hopper on the run behind second base in the fourth inning and tossed Third Baseman Mel Ott out at first, Lou Gehrig taking the throw. Center—The Yanks had a big inning in their half of the sixth, scoring seven runs. Both Catcher Bill Dickey, crossing the plate, and Lou Gehrig, holding the bat, scored on Rightfielder George Selkirk's single to right. Right—Lazzeri connects for a homer and is met by a happy bat boy at home plate in the eighth inning. The homer was the Yankees' last and eighth run.

Pair Irons Out Weight Difficulties

Fighters Agree to Terms After Ahearn's Threat to Drop Them.

Cowboy Howard Scott, the pug-nosed District lightweight champion, and Johnny Dean, the Irish jumping bean, yesterday ironed out their weight differences and signed for a ten-round match on the boxing card at Griffith Stadium Monday, October 18, for the children's free-lunch fund.

Scott and Dean came to terms only after Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who is promoting the fistic show for the citizens' committee with Joe Turner, told both fighters that either they'd sign or be washed off the card completely.

Previously Dean and his pilot, Henry Abrams, protested vehemently to this demand, but yesterday, after hearing a snappy pep talk from Goldie—Dean said he would make 137 the limit.

But Dean also informed Scott that he, too, would have to come in at 137 or less, and if he didn't—he'd lose $300.

Just now Dean is at least 4 pounds overweight, but he resumed training yesterday with renewed vigor, and expects to make 137 without much difficulty.

Also fighting on the card to share the spotlight with Dean and Scott are Lou Gevinson, local featherweight, and Danny London, of New York, who are to box ten rounds.

Tickets have been on sale for the last two days, and there is a good demand for them. In addition to seats being on sale at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W and at Goldie Ahearn's Ninth and E, they may be procured through any fireman or policeman.

Bout Between Girls To Feature Mat Card.

The "blonde feminine queen of the hempen square"—Clara Mortensen—will unravel her wrestling tricks tonight at Turner's Arena and attempt to prove why she calls herself the best lightweight in the world. The pretty Californian will be co-starred along with Vincent Lopez and Dean Detton, two former male champions.

Miss Mortensen recently returned from a four months' tour of the Pacific Coast, the Southwest and the South. She will invide the Turner mat for a one-fall-to-a-finish bout with Marie Gardina, of Texas.

Also on the card is Jack Hader, the Kansas meanie, who faces Bill Sledge. Karl Davis, another bad man, opposes Al Mercier.

Lopez speaks with authority when he unleashes his holds on an opponent. For a big man, he is like greased lightning.

Detton hasn't appeared at the arena since that night in January this year when he tossed Gino Garibaldi in a riotous affair. Detton, then champion, lost his crown to Nagurski last June in Minneapolis.

First bout is at 8:30.

Little World Series Won By Newark

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 6.—Newark's Bears, winners of the International League pennant by a 25½-game margin, defeated the Columbus Red Birds, 10 to 4, tonight for their fourth straight victory to capture the 1937 Little World Series, four games to three.

Losers of the first three games played on the New Jersey diamond, the Bears were almost a 1,000-to-1 shot to drop the series as the teams trekked West for the concluding contests, but they allowed the Birds a total of six runs in the four contests here and walked away with the laurels.

In winning, the Bears maintained their record of never having lost a game away from home in the minor league classic, and captured their second title in as many starts. In 1932 the Bears dropped two of three on their home lot to Minneapolis, but swept the first three at the Millers' lot to win.

Five Columbus hurlers, four of them the team's top quartet, were unable to halt a 13-hit barrage tonight, the Bear blows including four doubles, a triple and a home run. Joe Beggs started on the hill for Newark, but gave way to Pat Page, recent acquisition from Kansas City, in the fourth, as the Birds scored their first two runs.

Page did a neat bit of relief hurling, allowing but three hits the rest of the way, one of them a home run by Johnny Rizzo, in the last inning.

The Bears, despite the loss of the first three games, showed greater offensive power than the Birds. The Easterners collected 40 runs in the series, while the Birds were getting 22, of which 16 were counted in the first three contests.

Charley Keller, Newark right-fielder and the International loop's leading batter, led the series in hitting with an average of .478, getting 11 bingles in 23 trips to the plate.

Sam Fox, Central's glue-fingered end, helps to make the camera appear deceiving. The tall flanksman has apparently leaped high into the air to snatch a pass thrown from Quarterback Bob Goldsworthy. But, alas and alack, Fox dropped the ball when Miller, of Eastern, smashed into him while he was still off the ground.

down through nine holes, Mrs. Chandler settled down to business and beat Mrs. Reinhart M.Torgerson, of Queens Valley, N. Y., on the twenty-first hole.

Remaining in the contending ranks were Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., a 1936 semi-finalist; Patty Berg of Minneapolis who was runner-up to Mrs. Vare in 1935, and Mrs. Helen Lawson Shepherd, of Los Angeles, a veteran campaigner who turned back the "dark horse" challenge offered by Clara Callendar, the California champion from Del Monte.

Miss Berg had to call her favorite shots into action to survive a challenge from Hilda Urbantke, of Austin, Tex., playing in her first national. Miss Urbantke led 1 up for nine holes, but slipped on the incoming side to lose 3 and 1.

Two girls who have been constant traveling companions, fought it out in the third round, with Miss Hemphill annexing a two-up verdict over Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, of Greenville, S. C.

Hoyas Team Off Tonight To Big Game

Gridders, Band and Alumni Entrain to Meet Holy Cross.

A squad of "fighting mad" Georgetown University football players will leave Union Station at 9 o'clock tonight aboard the Federal Express for Worcester, Mass., where on Saturday afternoon, they will meet Holy Cross.

Making the trip in addition to the team, but by a different route, will be Georgetown's 60-piece band and a large delegation of alumni members. They will leave Friday afternoon for New York where they will board a boat for Providence, R. I. Met there by a special bus they will go directly to the stadium, arriving shortly before game time.

The starting positions of two erstwhile Catholic University regulars are in jeopardy as the Cardinals continue driving for their Sunday football test with LaSalle at Philadelphia.

As a result of his all around improvement and general steadiness at center, Pete Osinski, a reserve, is pressing Wayne Ambrose hard at center while Louise Shine looms as an outstanding threat to both John Kasunich and Al Calabrese at an end.

Maryland's grid squad, as it prepared for the Western Maryland game here Saturday, yesterday, learned that it had lost one of its leading tackles, John Dearmey. An X-ray disclosed that Dearmey, who was hurt in the scrimmage with George Washington last Wednesday, had a dislocated bone in his wrist in addition to a severe sprain.

George Washington's football squad took its first heavy workout of the week yesterday in a scrimmage with Maryland's grid forces at College Park. White not as strenuous as the first informal session these elevens staged last week, Jim Pixlee, G. W. head coach, was careful not to risk injuring any more players and only the second and third string Colonials were pushed into action.

Displaying the same strong offense that enabled them to push Penn last Saturday, the Terps, with Jarring Jim Meade leading the way, unfurled their strongest troops to put George Washington on edge for its game tomorrow night with West Virginia Wesleyan.

Seeks Grid Game.

ly won in that big sixth inning. The Yankees were dealing strictly in singles, bases on balls and the Giants' two errors in that sixth-inning uprising, but the Yankee home run, as advertised, was to make its appearance before the finish.

Its author was the aging Tony Lazzeri, who hitless until that point, waded into a pitch by Al Smith at the start of the eighth inning and bashed it on a line far into the leftfield seats near the foul line. It was the final flourish of the Yankees' parade of power.

An inscrutable figure out there on the mound with his dead pan immobile even in the tensest situations, Hubbell gave up a useless hit to the Yankees in the first inning—Joe DiMaggio's single just beyond the reach of Third Basemal Mel Ott—and then settled down to a stretch of masterful pitching. The next 14 Yankee hitters he disposed of in order and in the fifth he was rewarded with a Giant run.

The petulant Gomez, like Hubbell, was invincible for several innings after yielding a single to Billy Bartell in the first. Eleven men he sent away from the plate in order and then Right Fielder Jim Ripple wafted a short single into rightfield with none out.

The Giants' attack gathered force a moment later when First Baseman John McCarthy, a freshman at this World Series business, followed with a stinging single through Lazzeri's legs and Ripple dashed to third base.

It was here that the Yankees, in their apparently supreme confidence that one run would not win for the Giants, virtually conceded the run to the National Leaguers. Instead of the infield playing close in for a possible play at the plate, the Yankee infielders maintained their regular stations and were content to permit Ripple to score from third while Crosetti, Lazzeri and Gehrig were converting Mancuso's grounder into a double play.

Hubbell Walks Gomez.

And then, an inning later the Yankees struck. Not since DiMaggio had singled in the opening inning had an American Leaguer reached base. But, facing the weak-hitting Gomez at the start of the sixth, Hubbell presaged the rout that was to follow. He lost control and walked the Yankee pitcher.

The strain of those early innings had been too great, perhaps. Anyway, Hubbell lost not only the nicety of his control but his effectiveness. Frankie Crosetti tagged him for a sharp single to leftfield and Gomez raced to second base.

Here, Hubbell's support, particularly Shortstop Bartell failed him. Catcher Mancuso, in a sly maneuver, whistled a throw to Bartell at second in an attempt to trap the unsuspecting Gomez off base. Gomez was out, too, but Bartell dropped the perfect throw after tagging him. Umpire Steve Basil reversed his decision and Bartell was charged with an error.

Then the rout of Hubbell was on in full cry. Red Rolfe delivered a single into left field on which Gomez, playing safe, advanced only to third. But with the bases full, Joe DiMaggio met his first world series test like the slugger he is. Into center field he pounded the third straight hit off Hubbell—a line drive single—and two Yankee runs were across the plate.

DiMaggio had taken second on the throw to the infield and Manager Will Terry's strategy at that point was to purposely walk Lou Gehrig. He ambled to the mound to inquire how Hubbell felt and the lean pitcher gave him an affirmative nod, Terry withdrawing to the dugout.

Infield Playing In.

The Giants' infield was playing close at this point in an effort to cut down a run at the plate and Bill Dickey upset that little notion by whistling a single through the outstretched paws of Second Baseman Whitehead, scoring Rolfe. The Giants did cut off a run at the plate a moment later when Myril Hoag grounded to Ott, whose throw to Mancuso forced DiMaggio, but along came George Selkirk with the fifth hit of the inning off Hubbell.

Selkirk, hitless to that point, drove a brisk single into centerfield and Hubbell out of the box. The blow scored Gehrig and Dickey with a pair of runs that upped the Yankees' lead to 5-1. Hubbell, still apparently unmoved by it all, waited silently in the box until his successor appeared. As, finally, he strode to the dugout, the 60,573 stood on their feet to cheer the gallant fellow whose pitching had put the Giants into this series.

Then followed a queer World Series incident. The announcement was made that Gumpert would relieve Hubbell, but Dick Coffman strode to the box. Umpire in Chief Ormsby then held up play, demanding that Gumpert pitch as announced. Terry pointed out that Catcher Gus Mancuso had unwittingly called Gumpert's name instead of Coffman's, but the umpires were adamant, cited the rules and forced Terry to pitch Gumpert to at least one batter.

The one batter to whom Gumpert did pitch heaped more grief on the Giants. But it was with the aid of Second Baseman Whitehead. Whitehead made a dismal muff of Lazzeri's soft grounder that would have been the third out and Hoag scored from third.

In came Coffman to face Gomez, up for the second time in the inning, and for the second time Gomez walked to set some kind of a special record for World Series pitchers drawing two walks in the same inning. After Crosetti flied out to Moore, Coffman walked Rolfe to force the Yankees' seventh run of the inning over the plate.

But those Yankee runs after the second one were entirely superfluous. Lefty Gomez was out there heaping grief on the Giants in clever style after the fifth inning that netted the National Leaguers their only run. Only two hits did Gomez permit after that fifth and one of those was a tainted affair off Moore's bat that looped into leftfield and dropped at the feet of Hoag. Gomez was pretty good again today. It seems that he hasn't been beaten yet in four World Series starts.

Subs Hold Navy Varsity Scoreless

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 6. — The scrimmage of the Navy this afternoon was featured by the effective defense of B. squad against the varsity. The first team, with the regular backfield of Ingram, McFarland, Antrim and Case, failed to score in a full half hour of playing.

With Cooke, Wood, Franks and Whitehead, the secon quartet, which did such good work against Citadel, Saturday, the varsity took the ball on B's 30-yard line and carried it over promptly, most of the ground, however, being covered on Cooke's two passes. Wood took the ball over tackle for 4 yards and a touchdown, and added a point with a placement kick.

Old Favorite Victor Over Wild Turkey

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oc. 6.—Evergold, one of the most popular stake horses in Maryland before old age and a pair of ailing front legs almost ended his racing career, found a heavy race track to his liking today and ran eight sprinters into defeat in the Grade B Handicap that occupied the feature position on the turf program here. The hefty 8-year-old forged to the front at the head of the stretch, and, under Jockey C. Parke's urging, arrived at the finish line a length and a half in advance of the Tranquility Farm's Wild Turkey. E. D. Shaffer's Evening Tide was third.

Evergold was in such poor shape last year that he won only $100, second money in a cheap race. This year he won three events in Texas and was third in two starts in New York. Only a few in the crowd of 8,500 here today had the courage to gamble with Evergold's legs, and those who did collected a $22.40 mutuel.

When the start of the 6-furlong race came, Evergold was not prominent. However, Jockey Parke spanked him with the whip, and the veteran went up. Gold Band and Evening Tide were one, two going to the turn and the former opened a gap. Forced to race the long way, on the outside, Evergold, gradually gained. Entering the stretch, Evergold went to the front and opened a gap of his own. It was well that he did for far back came Wild Turkey. Running in a manner that befits her name, the Hourless mare cut the final corner and closed with a bold rush. Evening Tide lasted long enough to take the show money from the wiltering Gold Band.

Daily Double players of the successful group collected $38.10 on the winning combination of One Jest and First Alarm.

One Jest, trained by Mary Hirsch and owned by her father, Max Hirsch, defeated a field of juvenile fillies in the first race. Jockey G. Seabo stepped the On Watch filly to the front soon after the break and there proved to be none capable of catching her. Pretty Pet and Graeme Cracker were closest at the end. One Jest paid $7.30.

Don P. Ross, owner of the Brandywine Stable, visited the track today and watched his Masked General take the second race at a $10 mutuel. The heavily weighted Wrenace was second ahead of Timber Lady. The last named had a 6 length lead at one stage, but faltered badly in the stretch. Jockey Joe Wagner gave the winner a fine ride.

First Alarm, owned by Mrs. J. V. Stewart, graduated from the maiden ranks in the third race, coming from behind the pace of Bold Pirate and Abbots Hour to draw out in the closing stages of the mile and 70 yards test. Jockey H. LeBlanc, a riding sensation at this track last year until he broke his arm, piloted the winner which paid $7.90.

At home in the heavy going, Golden Vein proved a worthy favorite in the fourth race. Jockey G. Miller had a strong pull on the horse as he finished two lengths ahead of Peppery. Braving Danger was third. Golden Vein was under restraint while Max B. set the early pace but once put to a hand ride, he opened a long lead and was coasting at the finish. The mutuel was $5.60.

A. C. Compton's Church Call drove to victory at a $7.80 mutuel in the seventh race. Jelly Roll, the favorite, was second and First Pigeon third. Sun Asia, a $3.50 choice, took the sixth event, being followed over the line by Manrico and Pompeius.

Stuart Martin Has Appendix Lifted

St. Louis, Oct. 6 (AP).—Stuart Martin, St. Louis Cardinal infielder, underwent an operation at St. John's Hospital today for the removal of his appendix.

Dr. Robert F. Hyland, surgeon for the National League baseball club, performed the operation. The hospital tonight reported Martin was "doing nicely."

Party Spirit Wins.

Salem, N. H., Aug. 6 (AP).—Party Spirit, 4-year-old owned by Arthur McDonnell, which had not even been close in 16 previous starts this season, slipped through on the rail to win the six-furlong Dover Handicap at Rockingham today.

DAILY DOUBLE, ONE JEST AND FIRST ALARM, PAID $38.10.

Export Buying Holds Wheat Prices Steady

Early Decline Is Followed by Late Advances With Rise in Stocks.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Buying that was credited to export business did a good deal to bring about moderate late advances of wheat futures today following earlier material setbacks. Wheat market final gains, as well as preceding downturns today, were virtually simultaneous with like fluctuations in securities. Highest prices of the day in wheat were current at the last.

In some quarters, belief was voiced that numerous transatlantic buyers had purchased wheat futures today which will be exchanged later for cash wheat available for ready shipment when needed.

Chicago wheat futures closed ¾-1¼ cents above yesterday's finish, December $1.06⅜-¼, May $1.06⅛-⅜, July $1.01⅝. Corn ⅛-⅝ up, October, 66⅜; December, 61¾-⅞; May, 63¼-⅜. Oats varying from ⅛ decline to ¼ advance. December, 30⅜, and rye unchanged to ⅛ better. December 77½. Provisions results were 10 cents lower to a bulge of two cents.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Close Higher After Sinking Spells; Government Bonds Lower.

New York, Oct. 6.—Stocks had two bad periods during which new low prices were set, but after the second, which took place early in the afternoon, the market hardened so that most losses were regained and closing prices were higher in the majority of stocks. Sales volume of around 1,800,000 shares was the largest in over a week. Trading was slow toward the close with a steady tone. United States bonds declined and most commodities were weak. December wheat closed 1⅛ cents higher at 106⅛ cents a bushel.

Security markets felt badly enough from their recent shaking, and just as they were beginning to recover a little from the bad fall at the opening, more definite word came from President Roosevelt as to his plans for a special session. Moreover, the outline of the program was in itself disturbing to what little confidence remains in business and finance. All the proposals, from a farm control bill through the hour and wage scheme, extension of Government competition with private utilities to reorganization of Government bureaus, involve a further large expenditure of money, a tightening of the screws on private business enterprise and an all around upset to industrial activity and financial markets. Unless President Roosevelt is even more stubborn, ill advised and vindictive toward business than even his critics in this part of the country think he is, any further fall in the markets will lessen by that much the chances of an extra session of Congress.

Searching for Bids.

Opening prices were 1 to 3 points lower in active stocks, the poor market in London and the liquidation in response to overnight margin calls being factors. Steel began 3 points off. Westinghouse opened more than 4 points down. Bethlehem gave up 3½ points. Standard Oil broke 2 points and Telephone 1 point. The first sales were in large blocks in many cases, as 7,000 shares for Steel 2,000 for Sandard, 1,000 for Bethlehem and 1,500 for Youngstown. The heavy blocks at the start, bunched orders in some cases, found the books scanty of nearby bids and specialists were reported to have called the aid of governors to arrange opening prices. That caused some delay. About 5 minutes after 10 the ticker stopped running for a short interval while trades were being arranged. Steel did not open until 11 minutes after 10.

New Low Levels.

A fair rally soon came to the aid of the markets after the first excitement passed and the tickers caught up with the job of recording prices. Markets then rocked along at just under the opening until after the lunch hour, when another selling wave took off 1 to 3 points, but it in turn called for a rally. At the low levels of the day the stock market average price in compilations showed that new lows for the past two years had been reached.

Inflation Again.

Senator Thomas (of Utah, this time) says the huge supplies of gold and silver in the United States make inflation "utterly impossible." Until now the general impression had been that the huge supply of monetary gold and of silver being used as backing for the issuance of paper money were just the things, pushed along by a Government deficit, that made inflation utterly impossible to avoid. The Senator falls into the usual error of thinking that the only function of gold is that of backing for a currency. Its inflationary influence springs from its property as a generator of credit, in the ratio of $10 to $15 of credit for every dollar of gold.

Profit Skeptics.

The mere presence in this country of nearly $13,000,000,000 of monetary gold is enough to make anyone uneasy lest credit be expanded unduly. The reason expansion has not taken place on a grand scale so far is that men who ordinarily would borrow money and create bank deposits or put to use the deposits which they already hold in the banks have not yet been able to find assurance either of profits worth the risk of business losses or of a limit to taxation that will enable them to keep profits if made.

If business is not to be taxed to death to meet the spending demands of the Government and if laws are not to be passed or used to force further additions to the cost of production, businessmen probably can work out their problems and make profits. Assured of currency stability, the long-term investor will come out of hiding and the capital needs of industry easily can be supplied.

Steel Output Drops Awaiting Auto Orders

Production Declines 8 Points to 66 Per Cent of Capacity.

New York, Oct. 6.—"Long-delayed automobile buying of steel, which has come in large volume from General Motors and Chrysler, particularly in sheets, did not arrive in time to prevent a further dip in steel ingot output this week to an estimated 66 per cent of capacity in the country as a whole from 74 per cent last week," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today, which continues:

"Apart from the automobile industry, from which further substantial orders are expected within the next week or two, current buying of steel is of the hand-to-mouth variety and in such small aggregate volume that there is still doubt as to whether the bottom of the production decline has been reached.

"Having reached the end of their once large backlogs, the mills are now forced to make a rapid adjustment of operations in line with the volume of day-to-day orders. A few companies received more tonnage in September than in August, but for the majority the sales trend in the past month was downward. October should bring an improvement over September, both in automotive buying and in general replenishment, but the extent of the latter is dependent upon the rapidity with which miscellaneous users of steels liquidate their present stocks, which in many instances are sufficient to last from 30 to 90 days at present rates of consumption.

Buying Lags.

"One obstacle to the resumption of buying by the railroads has been removed by the settlement of the wage controversy, and, although industry generally is opposed to further pyramiding of costs, there is a recognition of the justice of the carriers' plea for higher freight rates to compensate for wage rises. No word is obtainable from the Interstate Commerce Commission as to when a decision may be announced, and there is doubt in the steel trade that it will come in time to produce much buying of steel by the railroads over the remainder of the year. If orders should come late in the quarter they will benefit early 1938 schedules rather than this quarter's operations.

"Pig iron production has declined along with steel ingot output. At the end of September the United States Steel Corporation blew out nine blast furnaces, the independents took off two and one went on, leaving a net loss of 10 in a month."

Cotton Declines To New Lows

New York, Oct. 6 (AP).—Near month liquidation influenced by larger crop ideas sent cotton into new low ground today. December sold off from 8.10 to 7.97 and closed at 8, with the list unchanged to 13 points net lower, at the close.

The market opened unchanged to 5 points lower influenced by additional private crop estimates showing increases over figure from the same source last month. Trade and foreign houses sold December largely against purchases of later months which held steady.

Three crop figures were issued by private experts pointing to outturns of 17,250,000 bales, 15,965,000 and 16,352,000. The average of six private reports thus far is 16,596,000.

Exports today 1,494 making a total of 967,561 for the season thus far. Port receipts 39,810; U. S. Port stocks, 2,657,759.

Rails Boast Long Dividend Record

New York, Oct. 6.—A noteworthy feature of recent railroad history has been the small number of defaults on guaranteed stocks, says the Standard Statistics Co. today. In all, there are upward of 140 well-known issues of this type. About half of these have been consistent dividend payers for more than 50 years, while some two-thirds can boast a 40-year continuity. Excellent records of uninterrupted payments shown by the great majority of such securities are the more enviable when one considers the huge total of bonds in default that inevitably coincides with a period of great economic stress and financial readjustment.

Copper Cut Again; Now 12c Per Pound

After reaching 17 cents on March 31, the price broke sharply and leveled off at 14 cents from late in April until September 27, when it broke to 13 cents. From 12.75 cents, it fell to 12.50 cents yesterday and down to 12 cents today.

Behind Scenes at State Department as U. S. Objects to Invasion of China

1. Yesterday diplomatic services throughout the world were buzzing as were the communications services of the U. S. Navy and the State Department. Above is the Navy "communications," the most important link in keeping in touch with the situation in the East.

2. Reports from the U. S. Navy communication section are sent to the dispatching or traffic department, shown here, where messages are examined and relayed to the proper offices or officials. This is the second step in a service that keeps the State and War Departments in touch with foreign capitals and armed forces abroad.

3. Messages received are then delivered to the State Department telegraph office, where they are decoded behind locked doors. This office has direct contact with the Navy Department and various cable offices on this continent.

4. After decoding, the notes are delivered to the Secretary of State. This is what happened yesterday when the State Department received its report from the American Minister at Geneva.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., became superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday. He took the oath of office with Secretary Harold L. Ickes as a witness.

The successor to Dr. William A. White, world-famous psychiatrist and administrator, who died last spring, was sworn in by Floyd E. Dotson, chief clerk of the Interior Department, of which St Elizabeths is a unit.

"I feel very fortunate in having a man of the ability, character and service of Dr. Overholser to succeed Dr. White," Secretary Ickes said. "It is one of the most important positions not only in the Interior Department, but in the Government."

Established in 1855 as the Government Hospital for the Insane with an initial census of 63 patients, St. Elizabeths Hospital now cares for more than 6,000 on its 400-acre reservation in Congress Heights. Last year 40,056 persons received treatment in the clinical departments alone.

The hospital staff pioneered in malarial therapy for paresis and the institution also is noted for its general research work.

Bridge Tourney Opens Here Today

The Washington Bridge League will begin its seventh annual contract tournament at the Shoreham Hotel this afternoon.

As the tournament was ready to start, it was pointed out by officials that the championships are not an American Bridge League event, as announced.

The sponsoring body is so new its name still is tentative, being the American Bridge Association, a new national organization formed by the merger of two rival groups on an agreement signed here September 29.

Among those in the tourney are Mrs. Robert Fuller, Mrs. William McKenney, both of New York; Mrs. Allan Rutherford, of Baltimore; Mrs. Milton Hagy, of Philadelphia; Mrs. J. O. Fankhouser, of Hagerstown, and others. Mrs. M. R. West and Mrs. V. A. Clarke, local luminaries, hold the championship.

Bob Burns Says—

I'll bet there ain't a one of us that can't look back and see where we've missed out on somethin' by bein' too impulsive. One time Aunt Dutty shook Uncle Beany in the middle of the night and says, "Get up, quick! There's a burglar tryin' to pry open the dining room window!" Uncle Beany shushed her and says, "Be quiet—don't make a sound!"

After a while, when Uncle Beany hadn't made a move to get up, Aunt Dutty says, "What's the matter? Are you afraid of the burglar?" Uncle Beany says, "No," and she says, "Well, why don't you scare him away?" And he says, "Well, I don't want'ta scare him away until he gets that window open—I ain't been able to budge it since it was painted!"

Do American Voters Want Neutrality?

12-Year Fight For NewSchool Nearer Reality

Commissions and Board Back Bunker Hill Parents Building Drive.

With their fight for a new Bunker High School entering its twelfth year, Michigan Park residents feel a little nearer their goal than when they started. Everybody from the District Commissioners down to the youngest pupil at the school seems to feel a new building is needed. The request has been listed in the District budget for the third consecutive time. But "there just doesn't seem to be any money," Michigan Park has concluded.

In an interview with The Post last night, John J. Hurley, president of the Michigan Park Citizens' Association, painted a dismal picture of conditions in the present two-room building.

"The school was built in 1911 to accomodate 50 pupils," he said. "The average attendance has been more than 100 for several years. We're on the Maryland line and expect more nonresident students every year now. In our section we reported over 800 single and semi-detached houses and 110 new duplex apartments this year, as compared with 589 single and semi-detached dwellings in 1935.

"With increasingly crowded conditions, more and more children are being transferred to other schools—Brookland, Burroughs, Wheatley and Noyes. Some of them have to go as far as four miles to school every day. The majority of the children go about one and a half miles to Brookland, crossing Twelfth street and Michigan avenue on their way. There is constant danger from street cars and heavy trucks, and the only police to protect them are those stationed in front of the school."

At Bunker Hill itself, according to Hurley, the most serious subject of complaint is a makeshift classroom which has obstructed the second floor corridor for more than ten years. Two kindergarten classes meet daily in the space, which has been set off from the rest of the hall by a partition.

Miss M. E. Foehl, the kindergarten teacher, protested further that the temporary room is noisy.

Other complaints which parents make of the building include its antiquated sanitary facilities, lack of office space and of privacy for the teachers and absence of rest rooms.

The Bunker Hill Parent-Teacher Association has been co-operating with the citizens' group through its president, Mrs. W. M. Leonard.

The P.-T. A. has been sponsoring a new building for the sake of the community at large as well as the school children.

Several years ago the District purchased land adjoining the present building to be used for a new school. The Board of Education's plan is to erect the first unit of a 16-room building there which would house not only the kindergarten and the first four grades which now meet at Bunker Hill, but a sixth and a seventh grade as well.

Next year's budget, which as usual provides for the new building, is now awaiting the approval of the Commissioners. It has yet to run the gauntlet of the Bureau of the Budget and both Houses of Congress.

Hurley is convniced that the Board of Education is in sympathy with the cause, but is not so sure they can do anything about it.

Citizens' Body Opposes D. C. Budget Hike

Friendship Association Acts on 6 Major Questions.

The Friendship Citizens Association last night acted on half a dozen major District problems from traffic control to free lunches for underprivileged school children.

Resolutions were adopted opposing any increase in the District budget over the current year, opposing the present law admitting children from nearby communities to District schools, and recommending a new law permitting these children to attend schools on payment of "a reasonable tuition fee."

Mrs. Hazel A. Spicer, secretary, was named to represent the association on the committee to raise funds for lunches.

Four resolutions relating to traffic control and safety were adopted. They approved legislation which would require taxi drivers to carry liability insurance. They voted to urge all District schools to make courses on safety a permanent part of their curricula, following recent installation of these courses in two schools by the A. A. A. They planned to urge immediate paving of Forty-third street from Warren to Yuma street, installation of traffic lights where Wisconsin avenue crosses Yuma street and Nebraska avenue, and study of the crossing of Reno road with Yuma street.

Omaha's Navigator, Defended by Chief

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 6.—Capt. Howard B. Mecleary, United States Navy, commander of the light cruiser, Omaha, which was stranded in the Bahamas last July 19, today commended Lieut. Comdr. Edgar R. Winckler, United States Navy, navigator of the ship, who is on trial by a Navy court-martial for "negligence and neglect of duty" in connection with the accident. The Omaha's captain told the court that Commander Winkler is an excellent officer and navigator, according to information received from the Norfolk Navy Yard where the trial is being held.

Facing court-martial himself as a result of the beaching of the Omaha, Capt. Mecleary took the stand at the request of the prosecution. He asserted the usual instruments were of no value in determining the depth of the water or in taking bearings before the vessel was stranded. Commander Winckler expressed no doubt of the ship's safety and did not report it to be in danger, he testified.

The Omaha is now undergoing repairs at the Norfolk Navy Yard which are expected to cost approximately $200,000.

Anti-Trust Law Revision Asked By Cummings

Change Sought to Combat Identical Bids for Government Contracts.

Revision of the Sherman anti-trust laws specifically to meet increasing cases of identical bidding for Government contracts was called for yesterday by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

"Collusive bidding is becoming quite a conspicuous feature of modern bidding," said Cummings, pointing to difficulties in prosecuting such cases under the present law.

The Attorney General said he earnestly believed "that we are not going to get anywhere in the prosecution of antitrust cases without a revision of the law. It will not be an easy job, and anyone who says he has an offhand or immediate answer doesn't know what he is talking about."

Pointing out that mere presence of identical bids is not prima facie evidence, Cummings added:

"You must produce evidence of some collusive arrangement because the day is long past when bidders sid down around a table and agree upon a price. The problem is much more complicated than that."

Justice Miller Hails Leaders Of Democracy

Georgetown Law Class Hears Address on Graduation.

Reminding that "this is a Government of law and of men," Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals, told a graduating class at the Georgetown University School of Law last night that "a democratic government can be preserved only by leadership."

He spoke at the fall convocation opening the new academic year at which Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., president of the university, conferred degrees on a class of 11 graduates. Academic prizes also were awarded to honor students among the undergraduates.

Dean George R. Hamilton presided at the exercises and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the law school, made the concluding address.

Undergraduate prizes, first and second, respectively, were awarded honor students as follows: Third-year afternoon class, Vernon Lee Wilkinson, of Washington, and Theodore Israel Seamon, of Maine, second.

Second-year afternoon: Frank Joseph Dugan, of Missouri, and Albert Edgar Berry, of Maryland, second.

G. W. U. Students Hold Vote Rally

In an effort to get all 7,431 students of George Washington University "out to the polls," an election rally was held yesterday afternoon on the university yard.

The polls will be open today and tomorrow from the hours of 9 a. m. until 12:30 p. m. and from 4:30 p. m. until 7 p. m. As a result of the voting, 100 members of the Student Union will be selected from the Right, Center and Left parties.

This is the fourth annual voting to select council members—who, in turn, will plan a series of programs on international affairs. Started at George Washington, the idea has been picked up by other universities.

Craft Unions Are Held Competent Agents for Bargaining.

individual bargaining units at a hearing last July, were the Pattern Makers Association, the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Welders and Helpers, and the International Association of Machinists. They claimed jurisdiction over about 450 craft workers.

"The amalgamated contends that the entire Commonwealth plant should be treated as a single unit appropriate for the purpose of collective bargaining," the board said in its decision.

"The federation unions, however, have shown that there exist in the plant separate groups which, in the absence of conflicting claims by other unions, could be found by the board to constitute separate units appropriate for the purpose of collective bargaining. They have, in addition, shown that they have a substantial number of members in each of these groups.

"The board holds that in such a case the men in the smaller groups claimed should be given an opportunity to determine for themselves whether they desire to be represented separately or together with the balance of the plant."

To allow the minority groups to establish their claims, the board ordered elections held within 15 days to determine whether a majority of the workers in each craft want an A. F. of L. union, the C. I. O. affiliate, or neither, to represent them in negotiations with the company.

(At the American Federation of Labor convention in Denver, Joseph Padway, of Milwaukee, a labor lawyer, had suggested that the organization strive for amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations act to compel the Labor Board to hold employe elections by crafts in plants or industries employing more than one craft.)

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. Adv.

One Is Arrested In Rug Robberies

They arrested Normal Earl Longmaid, 24, of the 1500 block of Nevada avenue northwest, and held him for investigation.

His arrest followed discovery of more than $1,000 worth of imported rugs in the home of a friend of his in Baltimore. The name of the friend was not divulged.

Fashion Parade Is Planned Here

Meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, the Connecticut Avenue Association voted to stage a fashion promenade and exhibit in the near future, at a date to be announced later.

Composed of business men and business women on lower Connecticut avenue, the organization is noted for its displays and shows, and the affair this year again will include a procession of manikins displaying the latest and smartest in this year's fashions.

Opposition to the construction of an underpass beneath Dupont Circle for Connecticut avenue traffic, as proposed by the commissioners, was voiced by the association. Prospective customers for the shops would be carried underground, under this scheme, the association held.

Theodore S. Grape, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, and his assistant, Jacques Downes and Fairrax Oyster were guests at the meeting.
